Bridge Assessment

Will be $44,316.29

Weymouth taxpayers will be called upon to pay an assessment of $44,316.29 toward the cost of the Monatiquot bridge built during the war on Quincy avenue by the Norfolk County Commissioners, and also increased county tax.

The commissioners on apportionment find that the total cost was $337,282.73, of which nearly one-half is assessed upon Norfolk county $147,720.96.

The next largest assessment is on the city of Quincy—$52,242.73— but only $8,026.44 more than the town of Weymouth which comes third.

Although the bridge is wholly within the limits of Braintree, and an expensive drawbridge was necessary to accommodate a Braintree industry that town is assessed only $40,943.46, which is $3372.83 less than Weymouth.

Plymouth county towns are largely benefitted by the bridge, as shown by the count of automobiles using it, yet Plymouth county is assessed only $41,840.81.

Although the street railway company made a desperate fight against any assessment, they are called upon to pay $10,118.48, which is none too large.

The assessments are as follows:

County of Norfolk	$147,720.96
County of Plymouth	41,840.81
City of Quincy	52,342.73
Town of Braintree	40,943.46
Town of Weymouth	44,316.29
Eastern Mass. St. Ry. Co.	10,118.48

AMERICAN LEGION

Post 79, American Legion, held its regular monthly meeting Monday evening in G. A. R. hall. There was a good attendance and many interesting discussions were thrashed out.

The show committee reported that everything was progressing lovely, practically all the tickets are sold, but some of the members still have a few so if anyone desires tickets it would be well to get in touch with some member of the Post and procure you tickets now as they will be all sold before the night of the show April 13.

The subject of the Post's annual field day was discussed and it was voted to hold this great event on Saturday, July 14 at the South Weymouth Fairgrounds. Everybody for miles around remembers that great field day that the Post had last year but this year the Legion is endeavoring to make this event the greatest thing that Weymouth ever had.

Comrade Cotter is going to hold a wrestling tournament in Fogg Opera House. The feature bout will bring together Rockland's "Iron Man" Felix Sney and Weymouth's champion Basil Warren. As everyone knows Warren's ability as a wrestler it would be well to procure your tickets early and see this great bout.

This is the night that the Legion Band is to give a concert in the Sheppard store in Boston. It will be broadcasted all over the country, so get on your earlaps all you radio fans and hear Weymouth's American Legion Band. The program for this concert will be printed next week so don't forget the date, April 18.

Injunction Hearing

A steam shovel is at work on the foundation for the enlargement of the High school, but as yet no money is available, as the petition for an injunction is still pending.

Town officials and the building committee were summoned to appear on Tuesday, April 3, before Judge Crosby of the Superior Court, to show cause why a petition for an injunction restraining the Selectmen from issuing bonds for $250,000 for the enlargement, should not prevail.

Town Counsel William J. Holbrook represented the Selectmen and asked that the petition be dismissed.

The petitioners were also represented by counsel who wanted a continuance.

A continuance was granted until Friday of this week.

Town Counsel Holbrook claims the Weymouth Town Meeting Act annuls the General Laws requiring a two-thirds vote of the voters of the town.

It is said the petitioners will take the case to the full bench if Judge Crosby refuses an injunction.

MRS. ERNEST BARKER

In Allston on April 2 at her home, 11 Price road, Lena M. (Wilbar) Barker, wife of Ernest Barker, died aged 50 years. Mrs. Barker was stricken with cerebral paralysis in the early morning and died without regaining consciousness before noon. Funeral services were held two days later at the nearby Allston Congregational church, conducted by the pastor and Rev. Frank B. Cressey, who was Mrs. Barker's pastor when living in Weymouth some twenty years ago and by whom she and Mr. Barker were married eleven years ago the seventh instant. Burial at the Village cemetery, Weymouth.

TOWN AND VICINITY

—Brookline has a dean for girls of the High school and the City Federation of Quincy unanimously endorsed the plan for that city this week.

—The Assessors of Quincy are making a house to house canvass of the city and hope to add $10,000,000 to the city's valdation this year.

—A large class were given the Select Degree at the meeting of Temle Council, Royal and Select Masters last night. The work of Temple Council ranks among the best in the State of Massachusetts and brings forth much praise from those that witness it.

—Weymouth radio fans who were listening in Monday evening when the Navy Yard at Charlestown picked up a faint S. O. S. call for assistance and ordered all broadcasting stopped for awhile, received a thrill. It seems the vessel City of Victoria was afire off the Azores. The opera of "Die Meistersingers" was resumed in ten minutes.

—Delphi lodge, K. of P. worked the third rank on a large class before a well attended meeting last night. On next Wednesday at Gem theatre, April 11, the work of the amplified third will be shown before special guests including John Ballentyne V. C.

—Car fares have been reduced in Quincy; that is, $1 tickets are good for one more ride.

—Weymouth High has an at home game with Hingham High scheduled for May 1, and on Memorial Day will play at Hingham.

—Ruxton's express now delivers to all parts of Weymouth. Three trips every day to Boston.

—Every modern home should should have hot water service .Consult J. E. Ludden.

—It will pay you to have your auto work done at the Pleasant View Auto Repair Shop.

—That's mighty good stuff the Gazette-Transcript is printing about assessed land values; so say many readers. It means lots of work, but that is what the Gazette is here for.

THUNDER STORM

Weymouth was visited last night by the heaviest rain of 1923, and there was thunder and lightning between 8 and 9 o'clock. A bolt struck the 30-foot flag pole on the Quincy postoffice and shattered it into small splinters. Big electric transformers were struck causing all the street lights and house lights to go out.

JACKSON SQUARE VALUES

Editor Gazette-Transcript:

Evidently "A. B. C." is a booster when he advocates much higher values in Jackson Square, but some of his conclusions may be all right.

Of late I have noticed that the cellar where the Ford Furniture store formerly stood has been flooded with water. This does not seem like a very valuable site. Why tax it for 50 cents?

Several of the stores on Broad street, even in Jackson Square do not seem to be very prosperous and one long established has gone out of business. Do we want to drive others out?

Evidently there are too many stores in Jackson Square; all cannot make a living.

What Weymouth needs is a curtailment of appropriations and lower taxes. Lower rents will not come until we have lower taxes.

Commercial Club

For Washington Square

At the meeting held March 19, 1923, it was voted to form an organization of the business people located in Weymouth and East Braintree.

The committee elected at that meeting to bring in by-laws and nominations for officers have met and worked up proposed by-laws, and have also a list of names for officers to present to you which it is believed will meet with your hearty approval. These men with co-operation the committe feel can put the organization over and make it the success all want it to be. Copies of the proposed by-laws will be ready for all at the next meeting.

In the by-laws it is proposed to call the organization the Business Men's Association of Weymouth and East Braintree" as this is the district of which the organization intends to promote the welfare and interest. It is suggested that any person located in this district shall be eligible for membership who will pledge himself (herself) to the support of the organization.

The dues as proposed in the by-laws are $10 yearly, payable in advance. The committe felt that it would not be wise to have the dues so high as to be prohibitive, but to have them at a figure which would allow everyone interested to join, and to give the organization sufficient funds to operate without continual assessments.

It is further proposed in the by laws to have regular meetings held the second Monday of each month with the annual meeting to be held the second Monday in April at which time the annual election of officers will take place.

The committee have interviewed some of the business men who are eligible to belong to the organization and have secured the names of many who have pledged their support.

The next meeting will be held in the Gem Theatre at 7.45 P. M. Monday April 9. Copies of the proposed by-laws will be ready and also application blanks.

Several propositions have been made which the organization could consider and a very interesting meeting is in prospect.

Let's have a large attendance, adopt by-laws elect officers, exchange ideas, have a real, open discussion and get started on something constructive for all the business men of Weymouth and East Braintree.

Very truly yours,

"TRES BIEN"

Those who attend the musical comedy of Braintree Post, American Legion, at Bates Opera House this evening are assured a good entertainment. "Tres Bien" was given Braintree Town Hall on Tuesday and Wednesday evenings and a local paper has this report:

The conductor, Joseph A. Crossen, wrote and produced the play from a plot suggested by members of Post 86. Cuff's orchestra furnished the music. Miss Mrion Leary as "Justice" spoke the prologue very impressively. Scene 1 was at the cafe "Le Cheval Blanc" Brest, France. Miss Marie Lamkin was a winsome little French girl and M. T. McAuliffe gave a clever impression of an English officer. Henry Driscoll, George Packard, Warren Simmons, Pedro Christensen, William Hollis, and Chester Rogers were American soldiers and all gave good impersonations.

The eccentric dancing of Carroll Stanwood as a "Gob" was one of the hits of the show. Marguerite Packard, in charge of a Red Cross canteen had many admirers and Harry Hurley was effective as the German spy masquerading as an American officer. The selections by the Doughboy Quartet, J. S. McLaughlin, James Mahar, Steve LeVangie and John Cahill were well rendered.

Scene 2 showed the interior of a Red Cross canteen. Stanley McLaughlin as Harry Lauder gave a life-like imitation of the famous comedian, ably seconded by the Scotch lassies of the chorus. A "Study in Songs" by Marguerite and George Packard was done naturally and with a true professional air. Another musical treat was "My Hero" from "The Chocolate Soldier" by Miss Marguerite Murphy. The scene closed with the singing of "Old Calico of Blue" by Mary Dunn and Steve LeVangie. There was a capable chorus assisting and it was one of the feature acts.

Scene 3. "In the Training Area" introduced new characters, Miss Barbara Murphy, Miss Maria Murray, Miss Vera Hall, Harold Brackett, Jack Dunn, Edward Lewis and L. Griffin. Miss Murphy as Mlle Le Bourge sang "Who'll Take My Place When I'm Gone" and was the recipient of much attention from her soldier admirers. "Absent" was well rendered by Miss Beatrice Silver.

Scene 4 took place in a dugout near Sedan Nov. 11, 1918. William Scanlon, as a Poilu was a typical soldier of France and sang the famous French song "Madelon" with a true Gallic touch. Other musical numbers were "Peep Through the Window" by Jack Dunn and a rousing chorus "Hello Home" by the boys. The final number was "Veterans of the World War" with Marion O'Rourke, soloist. After remarks by Commander Powers of Post 86, the grand finale "The Heart of America" was presented. Miss Lillian Gogan was the "Goddess of Liberty" and the "Doughboys of 1917—1918" were Carl Bjorkman and Harry Wynot.

The work of Joseph A. Crossen as conductor is worthy of special mention. He had the entire production in hand every minute and his efforts are largely responsible for the success of the production. The ushers were Miss Ivy Prado, Miss Katherine Schraut, Miss Helen McAulice, Miss Louise McCluskey, Mrs. Minnie Higgins, Mrs. Beatrice Rowell of the American Legion Auxiliary. They sold candy between the acts. The show will be repeated tonight and Friday evening will be given in Bates Opera House, East Braintree.

In the Ensemble ballet were Vera Hall, Betty Bumpus, Catherine Dillon, Marion O'Rourke, Blanche Redman, Catherine Buckley, Celia Murray, Nellie Dunn

Scotch—Doris Hollinshead, Betty Bumpus, Helen Buckley, Maria Murray, Vera Hall, Alice Finnegan, Mary Benotti

Dream Girls—Catherine Dillon, Lillian Gogan, Betty Bumpus, Margaret McGrath, Mary McGrath, Helen Thistle, Grace O'Rourke

Calico of Blue chorus—Olive Drinkwater, Margaret Reardon, Mary Coneton, Anna Killian, Irma Killian, Mary McCluskey, H. Driscoll, J. O'Neil, J. O'Rourke, J. Murphy, I. Gannon, M. LeVangie

WEBB STREET FIRE

The alarm from box 35 at 9 o'clock Tuesday night was for a fire at the house owned and occupied by Francis T. Sawyer, 91 Webb street. The fire is supposed to have caught from a defective flue. The family was away at the time and the fire had gained great headway when discovered by a neighbor, Frank M. Bryant. The house was gutted and the contents practically destroyed causing a loss of $7000, insured.

Names of Weymouth Men Killed in King Philip's War

(By Rev. William Hyde)

On April 19, 1676, another attack was made upon Weymouth when Sergeant Thomas Pratt was killed. The inhabitants of Weymouth were in a state of continued terror; for almost every day Indians appeared before the town and daily they were in dread of attack. They dreaded war all the greater because most of the men were away in other parts of New England fighting the Indians, as they had been called out by the state authorities to fight the Indians in other parts of New England. Some of these men were serving on the Connecticut river and as the town of Weymouth was in such danger the officer of the town sent petitions to the Governor and Council in Boston to send back some of the men of Weymouth who were serving in the war in Connecticut as the town was in great need of defenders since most of the men had been called for service elsewhere and Weymouth was in the greatest danger. Letters and petitions on this matter are preserved in the state archives, and the records of the General Court. Gilbert Nash has quoted from some of them in his "History of Weymouth", pages 37, 38, 39. The writer of this sketch has found records of the names of the men of Weymouth who served in this war, but there are no doubt more that have not been discovered. Here follow the names of those he has found:

Hezekiah King, Isaac King, Jonas Humphrey, Joseph Richards, Allen Lugland, John Whitmarsh, Zechariah Gurney, Peter Gurney, John Reed, James Reed, John Ford, John Lovell Sr., John Hollis, William Millis, Edward Kingman, John Burrell, William Torray, Thomas Pratt, Joshua Phillips, John Arnold, John Record, Benjamin Pool, John Ludden, Abram Shaw, Robert Corbet, John Ashdown, Grace Cakebread, Jeremiah Clothier, William Read, James Stuart, John Hollis, Thomas Bayley, Samuel White, Richard Adams, Jacob Nash, Richard Ruse, William Sewell, John Pinchen Esq., Edward Skinner, Sergeant Whitmarsh. This is a larger list of soldiers from Weymouth in King Philip's war than has ever been published before. The writer has obtained them from Massachusetts State Records and from Bodges' "King Philip's war". It has been known that several persons were killed at Weymouth, but with the exception of Sergeant Pratt these names have not been known. The writer has examined all the books on King Philip's war, including Drake, Bodge and Sylvester, but without finding them.

At last he discovered an old paper in the files of the Suffolk court giving the names. This paper is one which tells something of the loss of estates It is called "A list of persons slain and lost estates at Weymouth in King Philip's war in 1675 and 1676. Those killed are as follows: Sergeant Pratt, Thomas Bayley, Allen Dugland, Benjamin Poole, John Ford. Those who lost estates are John Ranes, Sergeant Whitmarsh, John Richards. This paper is signed by the Selectmen of Weymouth, namely: John Holbrook, Thomas Dyer, John Bicknell, Stephen French, William Torrey, (clerk). The paper is No. 1497, and it is in File 17, of the Suffolk Court files. In addition to the above names others were killed and wounded in battles outside of Weymouth. Thus at the battle of Turner's Falls on the Connecticut river in April, 1676, John Ashdon of Weymouth, who was killed, and in another battle Isaac King was wounded, and is supposed to have died from his wounds, and Richard Ruse was wounded.

King Philip's war was the greatest Indian war in New England. It spread over Massachusetts, and into New Hampshire, Rhode Island, Maine and Connecticut, and in many of our towns there are stones placed to mark the place where a soldier fell in the war; many stories of Indian warfare occurred in this war. The attack on and defence of the town of Brookfield is one, the description of which is most interesting as is that of Lancaster, from which Mrs. Rowlandson, the wife of the resident minister, with her 6-year-old child was carried into captivity. In this war almost every kind of Indian warfare was carried on, the use of Indian strategy, the burning of towns and villages, ambushes, massacres, slaying mutilating, and scalping. Great skill was manifested by the Indians and especially by the chiefs, Philip of the Wampanoags, Canonchet of the Narragansetts, and the chiefs of the Nipinucks and Tarratines. The war was carried on for more than two years, the Indians burning and slaughtering all the way from near Boston to the Connecticut river, which was then the western frontier. In this war occurred the ambush of Capt. Hutchinson and his men who were on their way to the relief of Brookfield which was beseiged by the Indians. The attack and defence of Brookfield is one of the most thrilling incidents in the early history of the country. Then there was the ambush of Captain Beers and his company when on their way to the relief of the town of Norfield in which Captain Beers and twenty of his men were slain. There was also the ambush of Captain Lathrop and his men, all of whom were slain except seven men who escaped. This was called the Massacre of Bloody Brook.

Perhaps the greatest fort the Indians ever built was that at South Kingston, Rhode Island, in which nearly 4000 Indian warriors were gathered. This fort covered several acres and stood on high ground surrounded by a swamp. It was inclosed on all sides by strong palisades driven deep into the ground and the only entrance to the fort was by a bridge of logs over which it was almost impossible to cross, but the New Englanders forced their way through deep snow, and on Dec. 19, 1676, stormed this fort with all their force and succeeded in reducing it. In the assault six captains were slain and a large number of soldiers wounded. When the settlers succeeded in forcing their way into the fort in spite of the heavy firing of the Indians, they set fire to the wigwams and in a short time the whole 600 wigwams were in a blaze of light, the Indians were thus compelled to fly from the fort and the New Englanders were victories, although there was furious fighting outside. In this engagement more than 700 Indians were slain, including a score of chiefs and the Whites lost eighty men killed and 150 wounded. Many prisoners were taken by the Whites and these later were sold for slaves in the West Indies. It would seem as if this victory should have ended the war, and so it would have done if King Philip had been among the slain. But he made his escape, as he usually did, and was able to gather another force of Indians around him. The war went on for some time after this with the same kind of raids by the Indians and pursuits by the settlers.

One of the great leaders on the side of the Whites was Col. Benjamin Church. He finally followed Philip with a strong force to his special hiding place at Mt. Hope. The place was stormed by Church's men, but Philip escaped by a swamp. There was a White sentinel and a friendly Indian on the watch and as Philip came running in their direction they both fired at him. The White man's musket missed fire, but the bullet from the Indian's gun went through the heart of Philip, and he fell dead in a pool of water.

The war dragged along for about six months longer, but finally came to an end with no more hostile Indians in New England. During this war, out of the ninety towns in the Plymouth and Massachusetts Bay Colonies thirteen were destroyed and forty others were the scenes of fire and massacre and of the three tribes engaged in it but few remained.

How many men from Weymouth were engaged in the war we do not actually know, but somewhere between fifty and one hundred. The war is of great importance to Weymouth as so many of her citizens were engaged in it, and the town itself suffered by the raids.

We live in peace here in Weymouth now, but do we realize that 225 years ago this town was in danger from Indians for more than a year. Day and night guards had to be set around the settlement and continued watch kept. The people were in a very anxious state with not enough men to defend the place should a real attack come. Daily the Indians appeared before the place and sometimes in large enough numbers to do much damage, burning and destroying and sometimes taking life. We can imagine the terror that existed and how the women and children must have been in a state of panic.

There are some traditions that have come down as to where the fight with the Indians took place. One of the places is between White's Neck and Mill Creek, another at the base of Cemetery hill near Judgment valley, which is near the present Weymouth Heights railway station; another was near Great Swamp, which was in the region where Neck street is now located, and still another was on what is now Middle street between Broad street, and Whitman's pond. This was where Sergeant Pratt is supposed to have been killed. It would be an excellent thing if these places could be actually located and suitable markers set up to distinguish the places. Boys are said to be fond of Indian stories, and there is enough material around Weymouth to serve for many a good Indian tale or novel.

Gilbert Nash in his "History of Weymouth", states that during King Philip's war people of Weymouth were in danger wherever they went and planting was interfered with, as the farmers could not do their work for fear of the Indians, and that a night watch was kept in the town as late as 1678. The town suffered so much financially by it that when the war was over the town was poor, and it was given help from other places. The taxes of those slain were levied on the whole town, and it was years before the town recovered.

BACKACHE IS DISCOURAGING
But Not So Bad If You Know How to Reach the Cause.

Nothing more discouraging than a constant backache. Lame when you awaken, pains pierce you when you bend or lift. It's hard to work or to rest. Backache often indicates bad kidneys. Weymouth people recommend Doan's Kidney Pills. Ask your neighbor!

Peter Fowler, 10 Eliot St., Weymouth, says: "I suffered from a lame back and my kidneys acted irregularly. Doan's Kidney Pills made my back well and since using Doan's, my kidneys have acted regularly."

Nearly three years later, Mr. Fowler said: "I always keep Doan's Kidney Pills handy because they never fail to relieve any attacks of backache I have."

Price 60¢, at all dealers. Don't simply ask for a kidney remedy—get Doan's Kidney Pills—the same that Mr. Fowler had. Foster-Milburn Co., Mfrs., Buffalo, N. Y.

The World in Weymouth

A Missionary Exhibit

The Missionary Exhibit, "The World in Weymouth" held at the East Weymouth Congregational Church on Feb. 4—7, which was reported extensively in the Gazette at that time, has aroused considerable interest in Congregational circles everywhere. In this and the next few issues of the Gazette, thru the courtesy of the "Congregationalist", pictures of the exhibit will be printed describing the events of the four-day program. These pictures were taken by a Weymouth photographer, Arthur W. Cook.

THE WITCH DOCTOR

The central figure in the picture is the Witch Doctor of Africa. Rev. William G. Bell, missionary in Africa, conducted this part of the program, and explained how the Witch Doctor works in heathen countries. Directly in contrast to it was shown the interior of a Christian hospital. A small room was fitted up with bed, tables, and hospital apparatus, and two nurses stood in the room. This picture gave our missionary the opportunity to say something about medical missions.

THE ZENANA

THE HINDU SHRINE

A very simply constructed shrine and burning incense, an idol and the bed of spikes was constructed under the direction of Mr. Fuller. A sacred tree stood out in front around which the Hindu priest walked and decited prayers. Two hymns of opposite beliefs, one Hindu and the other Christian, were sung by two soloists respectively.

"TASKS AND TALENTS"

On Wednesday evening, following the Oriental Supper, the final event of the exhibit was the pageant, "Tasks and Talents". The central figure is "Every Christian", to whom the Tasks—India, Armenia, North and South America, and China—make their appeal for help. The Talents of Song, Thought, Gold, Prayer, and Sacrifice respond to assist Every Christian in her world responsibilities. Every Christian consecrates herself and her talents before the Cross. In conclusion, each of the representatives or foreign countries takes her position under the cross singing a verse of "In the Cross of Christ I Glory", and the congregation join in singing the final stanza.

Here's A Green Blind Paint That Fades Darker

That's exactly what it does. Instead of growing lighter and lighter and finally looking like a washed out blue, it starts in a vivid green and then gradually turns darker until it's reached a rich deep green.

Then it gets no darker, nor lighter. Just stays the way you want it to stay. Neither the salt spray of the seashore, nor the hot pelting sun have any effect upon it. Its name is Lowe Brothers Permanent Green.

You can't get it everywhere, but you can get it here. Drop in and we'll show you the color.

CLUB and SOCIAL

—The Old Colony chapter, Service Star Legion, will meet at the home of Mrs. A. E. Avery, East Braintree, on MoMnday, April 9, at 2.00 P. M On Thursday, March 29, the chairman of the welfare committee, Mrs. Paul Dowd, with the president and three other members of the committee visited the West Roxbury Hospital where more than two hundred and fifty ex-service men are confined. Through the kindness of Selectman Edward Avery of Braintree, who placed his time and car at their disposal, the ladies were able to bring a generous amount of fruit, homemade candy, cigarettes, gum, graphaphone records, magazines and a few potted plants to make a cheery Easter for these nerve-racked boys. Although the greater part of these goodies etc. were donated by chapter members and generous friends there is a fund in the treasury to supply any need that is not met by voluntary donations. A FAMILY WEAKNESS

"You are descended from the Pilgrim Fathers?"

"I am, sir," replied the impecunious citizen. "My ancestors came to this country 302 years ago and it's my firm belief that none of their descendants has ever accumulated enough money to make the return trip."

Gave Parents Good Laugh.

A. N. R. writes that this took place the other day at his family table:

Son (aged 7½)—Dad, which is the oldest language?

Dad—Sanscrit, as far as I know.

Son (after brief pause)—Mother, I know which is the oldest language.

Mother—Good for you, what is it?

Son—Transcript.—Boston Evening Transcript.

The Proof.

Paying Teller—But, madam, you will have to be identified before I can cash this check for you.

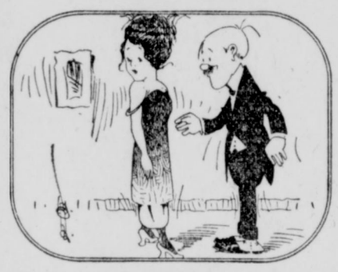

Fair Caller (blushing furiously)—Oh, I just hate to do it, and George would be dreadfully angry, but I have a love letter here which describes me fully, if you care to see it.

Quick Thinking.

Gordon Gin—Speaking of scandal, the last time I saw Miss Billings she wasn't able to walk.

Mr. Billings (who has overheard him)—What do you mean, sir!

Gordon Gin (hastily)—Er—she was too young—you see it was twenty years ago!

ART

"Mabel's face looks drawn tonight."

Very Comforting.

"If money is really vocal,
Then I'll say," quoth Harry Hupp,
"It's an optimistic talker,
For it cheers a fellow up."

Wifely Optimism.

Hub—When I see all those bills I get tired of living. Do you think the time will ever come when we shall be out of debt?

Wife (cheerfully)—Why not, dear? You know you are carrying an exceptionally large life insurance.—Boston Evening Transcript.

Patience Overplayed.

"A farmer has to be patient."

"Yes," replied Farmer Corntossel; "but he overdoes it when he don't do nothin' but sit on a fence an' wait for a real estate boom."—Washington Star.

Recitation.

"Can you recite the Declaration of Independence?"

"Yes," replied Senator Sorghum; "provided you can find a few people who are willing to sit still and listen to it."—Washington Star.

Serving the Country.

"Every man should be willing and anxious to serve his country."

"True," answered Senator Sorghum, wearily; "but why should so many insist on serving as postmaster?"—Washington Star.

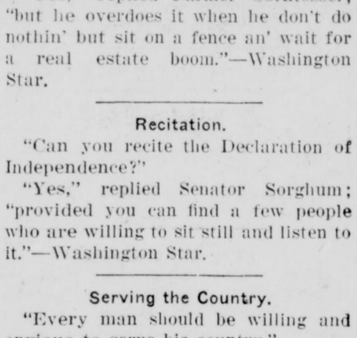

Simulations.

"A man in your position must be able to keep his temper."

"Sometimes," replied Senator Sorghum, "and at others he must pretend to be angry when he really isn't."—Washington Star.

NOT MUCH, IN HIS OPINION

Miss Plain—Papa declares that I am his greatest treasure.

The Cause.

"It looks," I commented, "as if whoever committed the crime did not pass through the living room."

Bartley gave me a disgusted look. "Or else, Pelt, the dog knew him. The only way to reach the room where Slyke slept was up those stairs, and to reach the stairs he had to pass through the living room. Remember this, too, Lawrence said that Slyke was not going to bed, but expected another visitor. The butler says the dog was in the room with him when he let Lawrence out. Suppose the other visitor came. If Slyke himself admitted him, the dog would have probably barked at least once—that is, unless he knew him."

"Then it might have been someone in the house," I suggested.

Bartley assented, and we discussed the various persons in the household. First, we both agreed that the shot the boy had heard was the one that had killed Slyke, and that the time must have been between half-past one and two o'clock. If that were so, then, when the girl came in about three o'clock, Slyke was already dead. Bartley was sure that it took at least thirty minutes to undress Slyke and get him down from the balcony to his room. If the shot that the boy heard was fired before two o'clock, then the girl would not be suspected, for she had not returned until three. We eliminated her.

Bartley then analyzed the sister-in-law. He said he felt sure she was hiding something, for she had not been frank in telling what she knew, and seemed anxious to get him out of the house. Whether what she was withholding concerned Slyke's death or not he could not tell; but whatever it was, he was determined to discover it.

"Do you remember, Pelt," he asked, "that Currie told us she runs a ouija board? There is nothing startling in that; thousands are doing the same thing. Since the war all forms of spiritualism have made hundreds of converts. When she met King at the door this morning, she told him that the board had spelled 'trouble' the night before."

I stared at him in astonishment. He seemed to be regarding a ouija board seriously. He saw my look and chuckled.

"Oh, I'm not interested in the ouija board itself; what I am interested in is that word 'trouble' that it spelled out for her."

This was more astonishing still, and I asked, "Why, you haven't any faith in those things, have you?"

Again he chuckled, then became serious. "Sure I have, but not in the way you think. The messages people think come from another world, come from the subconscious minds of the persons who are fooling with the board. They do not realize that they themselves are subconsciously directing its movements and spelling out their own messages. Now, that board wrote for Miss Potter, 'Trouble is coming,' not once but many times. What I want to know is this: What was the something that, deep in her mind, told her that trouble was coming? What was the cause of her fear?"

He lighted another cigar before he continued: "There is still another thing that shows she knew some danger was threatening. You remember she also told us that she had dreamed that Slyke had been killed."

I knew what he was driving at now. Freud, whose theory of psycho-analysis was well known to Bartley, had worked out the interpretations of dreams. The theory of psycho-analysis is that in our sleep the subconscious mind has full play; our repressions come to the surface and express themselves in dreams. The psycho-analyst is thus often able to explore the secret places of our minds through them and tell the cause of our trouble.

"Shakespeare was right when he said, 'We are such stuff as dreams are made of'," Bartley added in a quizzical tone as he paused to relight his cigar. "Miss Potter dreamed more than once that Slyke had been killed. We are told a dream is a suppressed wish, and that in our dreams our wishes are often hidden by symbols. This woman probably did not wish Slyke actually dead. She had no quarrel with him as far as I know. What she did wish was entirely different. She wished that he might be away so that he would be out of some trouble, and her suppressed wish caused her to dream that he was dead. That's the reason why I believe that she knows more than she will tell."

"What can it be?" I asked.

"I don't know, but it is something that was causing a great deal of trouble to Slyke, perhaps to all of them. It might even be something that will bring dishonor. Anyway, it was so serious that, sleeping or waking, it was on her mind. I wish she would talk; we need all the light we can get."

"But that does not actually prove that she knows anything about his death," I suggested.

Bartley turned quickly and glanced at me to see if I were serious. Seeing that I was, he explained: "I don't say that it does. The ouija board performances and the dreams were before his death, not after it. Of course, the fact that the dog did not bark throws suspicion on everyone that was in the house at the time."

He was silent for a while, glancing thoughtfully out of the window, and then resumed his story.

After I left him, he had locked himself in the tower for over an hour and gone over the two rooms and the balcony almost inch by inch. The only thing that had escaped us in our first search, he said, was a small stopper, the end covered with red wax. He was not sure whether the finding of the stopper meant anything or not. His second examination had made him more positive than ever that Slyke had been murdered, and that the murderer wished his death to appear to be suicide.

It would be almost impossible to make a jury believe that it was murder on the slight evidence that we had, and I said as much to Bartley. He agreed with me, and admitted he would not be surprised if King, as coroner, brought in a verdict of suicide. I pondered on this a while; then a thought struck me.

"Suppose, after all, he did kill himself, Bartley. You base your theory of murder on the position of the bedclothes and the way the gun was held. Suppose he did kill himself, and some other person, not the murderer, came into the room and pulled the bedclothes up around his neck."

He shook his head in denial. "We would still have, Pelt," he said with a rather sarcastic smile, "the other questions to be answered. First, we would ask how the blood-stains got on the balcony of the tower. We would also want to know why the hand did not grasp the gun as tightly as it should. Then we would demand to know why there was no blood on the pillow where his head rested. It won't do. There is no doubt of it. He was killed."

I interrupted to ask if, as Miss Potter admitted, she had closed his eyes, why she might not have been also the one who pulled the bedclothes up around his neck.

Bartley replied, "It is true that she did close his eyes, but she insists she touched nothing else."

"But," I broke in, "what was her real reason for doing it?"

"She said, you remember, that the eyes frightened her. Let a nervous woman come suddenly upon a dead body and it is very possible that the eyes staring at her might so frighten her that she would close them. Her confession cleared up a point that bothered me. The accounting for the eyes being closed does not prove that he committed suicide, however. There is little enough evidence one way or another, but what there is points to murder and to nothing else."

"There is another thing," I said. "Why was the revolver taken from him while we were upstairs? It seems a very foolish thing to have done. Who did it? Was it the butler or Miss Potter?"

Both the butler and Miss Potter had been out of the tower room, Bartley reminded me, for some time before we suspected Slyke's death was murder and not suicide. As to who had taken the revolver, it was impossible to say as yet. If we believed that the butler had seen Briffeur on the stairs while we were on the balcony, then he might be the one. The finding of the gun in the vault and his appearance almost immediately afterward seemed to point to him. Whoever had done it had been very foolish.

The next matter that he spoke about did not seem to have any relation with what had preceded it. It was the robbery of the year before. He had learned from the step-daughter Ruth that she had not positively identified the men now in jail, but had thought that one of the men was similar in height and build to one of the men she had seen in the room. The room had been too dark for her to see very clearly. Nor was that all that she had told him which had disagreed with the accounts of the burglary that Rogers had given us. He had said that she had aroused Slyke and told him that burglars were downstairs; while in her story to Bartley she stated that, after she heard the noise in the living room, she went to the door of Slyke's room to call him, but found it empty. When she saw him he was standing on the lower step of the stairs leading to the living room. There had evidently been a struggle, and a gun went off just before she reached him. It was she who had called the police, and Slyke had opposed her doing so "as nothing had been taken."

"You see how it looks, Pelt," he said with a grin. "Slyke did not want the police in at all. He did not wish any action taken, either then or later. He was nearer the men than anyone else, yet he swore he could not identify them. That makes me believe that he knew who they were and did not want the matter looked into."

"Did the girl tell you who found that piece of newspaper?" I asked.

"She said it was the chauffeur who had called their attention to it. The police do not seem to have made any search that night, or in fact until noon the next day. Then, with the help of the chauffeur and the butler, they searched the living room, and the chauffeur directed their attention to a piece of paper lying on the floor, half under a rug. Of course, you see what that leads to. For hours that room had been unguarded, and any one who wished could have gone in there. Even the piece of cloth was not found for several days, strangely enough; nor did the police find the footprints under the window until three days later, although they claimed they had searched the spot before."

I broke in with, "That looks, in other words, as if—"

"As if some one wished to send those men to jail," he finished for me.

He sighed, gave a little laugh, and remarked: "There are at least three things I would like to know. First, was the robbery a plant?"

"A plant?" I asked, looking at him in wonder.

"Yes! There may have been no robbery at all."

"What do you mean by that?"

He threw out his hands. "I don't quite know myself, but let that pass. There is another thing that puzzles me, and that is the chauffeur. I can tell by the way Miss Potter acted when we mentioned his name that she does not like him. He it was who took from the library the book with the account of the English crime in it. He had words with Slyke the day before the murder, and was missing when we wanted to question him. A few minutes after he was seen near the tower room the revolver was missing. I believe he is well worth watching. And lastly, what was the motive for Slyke's murder?"

"Perhaps the Girl Killed Him."

A wild thought struck me. I knew at the time how absurd it was, yet a desire to hear what Bartley would reply made me voice it.

"Perhaps the girl killed him."

Bartley gave me a surprised look, started to speak, then decided to wait and hear what I had to say.

MANY EDITORS! FEW PRINTERS!
One of the troubles of country weeklies is the lack of mechanical help. Very often there is only one man in a community who is able to stick type and lock up forms and when something happens to him it takes some nice engineering to get out the current issue. But when it comes to securing people to write for the paper it becomes a different story.

An article appearing in the Canton (Pa.) Sentinel on Jan. 18 expresses that angle so well that we take pleasure in reproducing it. We believe it was written by the editor of the paper, Fred Newell. The article, apparently inspired by a shortage in the back room, was as follows:

"We are compelled, again and again to wonder at the willingness of anyone and everybody to write for the paper.

"Not so very long ago a young man confided to us his hopes of entering the weekly newspaper business and he said that many prominent people of the town that was to witness his exploit were willing to help him in the way of writing articles for the paper to print.

"It is nothing at all uncommon for someone to come to us with a serious proposition, that they will 'edit' a weekly column or page, on the whichness of the whatisit, or something.

"When we advertise for printers, as we have done before now, we get stacks and stacks of letters from men all the way from 14 to 80 who are perfectly willing to come to us and edit the paper, while we, the boss, thus released from the thraldom of the front office, can devote our entire attention to the mechanical end of the paper.

"Within a year we advertised for a young man to learn the trade, and we had three applications from gifted youths who were willing to assume editorial management at once and completely.

"None of these people seem to think that their lack of actual experience in writing should operate against them in the least. They know all about it and are willing to take complete charge.

"There is one thing that all of them are perfectly willing to sidestep, and that is the bill paying end. They are willing tht we should continue to pay all the bills, while they do the 'editing'.

"We wonder why they all think they can 'edit'!

"No one expects to step right from the school room to the pulpit.

"No one expects to quit farming and immediately take up the practice of law.

"No one expects to quit clerking in a store and start practicing medicine.

"For any of these occupations they expect to undergo years of preparation.

"Now, the writer has been at this business for close to forty years. And he sometimes thinks that he don't know much about it yet".

LESS THAN BOSTON PRICES

EASTER SUNDAY

The First M. E. church of East Weymouth was well filled Easter morning when Rev. Earl E. Story preached on "Christ Conquering the World, Easter's Greatest Message". Several members were taken into the church and three children were baptized. One very unique feature of the baptismal service was the presence of four generations when Mr. and Mrs. Stuart McIsaac brought their infant son to be baptized attended by grandfather and grandmother and great-granfather. The music was rendered by the choir was very pleasing and the solos by Mrs. Harry Mattson and Mrs. Sanders were especially enjoyed.

On Easter evening a very elaborate and beautiful pageant was given in the vestry of the First M. E. church. The platform was beautifully decorated to appear like a courtyard. The extremely artistic arrangement added a great deal to the pageant and Mr. and Mrs. C. A. Rogers are to be congratulated on the splendid work which they did in making the setting so attractive. The pageant was entitled "The Questioner" and the leading part, that of the questioner, was taken by Harold G. Burgoyne. More than twenty of the young people of the church took part and it can be truthfully said that no prettier or more effective pageant was ever put on in this part of the town. The whole teaching of the pageant is shown by these words questioner: "But what if Jesus did rise from the dead? What meaneth that to me?"

Wisdom: "I will teach thee what it meaneth to thee. For this cause am I sent, and many of God's messengers shall aid me in this instruction. Nature shall teach thee, History shall teach thee, Reason shall teach thee, Experience shall teach thee, Sorrow shall teach thee, and Faith, also; yea, Death himself; and when thou has learned thy lesson, Joy shall come and abide with thee!"

The work of Miss Helen Preston in making this pageant a success is worthy of mention.

—The annual meeting of the Citizens Association of Precinct 4 will be held in the Association building on Front street on Tuesday evening, April 10.

—Ex-Senator Kenneth L. Nash of West street is a patient in the Phillips House of the Massachusetts General Hospital, Boston, where he recently submitted to surgical treatment.

—Miss Mary Robertson, who has been making her home with Miss Ada M. Perry, is a patient in the Weymouth Hospital where she is receiving medical treatment.

—Freeman Putney Sr. of Tower avenue is slowly improving from an attack of the flu with which he has been confined to his home for the past two weeks.

—It is reported that the land on White street owned by the late Edgar S. Wright has been purchased by Brown & Stackpole, real estate dealers, for development.

—Miss Sarah Tirrell is receiving treatment at the Weymouth Hospital for an injury to her ankle.

—Under the auspices of the Ladies Auxiliary to the Pond Plain Improvement Association an April Fool's party is to be held in the new bungalow on Pond street Saturday evening. The entertainment is to be provided by the Fountain Square Whist club and Mason's orchestra will furnish the musical numbers.

When the Australian system of voting was adopted he was clerk at the first election and had been warden at all elections since up to the time of his illness.

He was for years a regular attendant at Union Congregational church and had been for years a director and president of the Village Cemetery Association. He is survived by his wife.

The funeral took place from his home Monday afternoon and was very largely attended. The service was conducted by Rev. J. Caleb Justice, pastor of Union church. A male quartet sang. WEYMOUTH, APRIL 6, 1923

SUPPORT THE HOME PAPER

Subsidization of the Home Town Weekly by the local merchants was the theme of an editorial printed by Adv. Mgr. Ed H. Packard of the Cambridge (Mass.) Tribune on Jan. 13. It is a stirring article that should be clipped and read to the Rotary club or local business organization in every town where there is a disposition to pass up the opportunity of advertising in the local paper. Mr. Packard's article was as follows:

"The influence of the town newspaper cannot be overestimated. It is the only spokesman of the town to its people or to outsiders. It is a power and gets results for the things it advocates, advertises and aims for. If it is backed by the whole body of business men it can create an irresistible town spirit and atmosphere of loyalty and co-operation. Therefore the Tribune advises the business men of Cambridge to buy whole pages in Cambridge papers for 52 weeks in the year to enable their publishers to see daylight ahead and bend their best energies to develop local business for local business men.

"It is the lack of this broad vision and money-nerve by business men that forces town papers to enter outside fields, and every town paper in Massachusetts is doing it, thus using the influence and business building power of these organs to drag away from the home town money and business that could be kept there, representing millions of dollars annually.

'The local tradesman's fight, and argument and case—whatever it is—can be driven through, and all the town papers will drive it through, if subsidized—and that much misinterpreted word 'subsidized' merely means financial backing, the same as the government is giving a dozen different agencies trying to push along its interests successfully. One merchant in this town, a grocer, hit the right idea when he said to our reporter in discussing this matter: 'I will come in if two-thirds of the members of a business organization of this district will, and that is the spirit we want in this town precisely—of groups of business organizations getting behind the town papers in a well thought out persistent drive to cultivate town business.

"Co-operation is the watchword. The community idea is all right and can be developed. For example, Salem has cultivated extensively the home trading spirit, and to the immense financial advantage of its merchants. It might pay a group of our tradesmen to run down there and see how some millions of dollars are annually diverted to Salem tills that formerly was spent in Boston. The Salemites have put through a scheme to keep Salem business in Salem and the same town loyalty and community spirit exists everywhere and no matter how low an ebb it has receded to, the newspapers of this city, if backed up two pages a week through live press men to take care of the merchants' interests, will do here what Salem business men have accomplished.

"If the business men of any town know which side their bread is buttered they will, through their trade clubs, subsidize every newspaper in town heavily to fight the town fight, cultivate a town spirit and local trading atmosphere, and will do it systematically as a matter of cold and sound business policy—supplementing the campaign with local trade notes columns. This plan is worth extra millions to Cambridge merchants and banks this year".

Dear Sir: As secretary of the Ladies Auxiliary to the Pond Plain Improvement Association I am instructed to write to you expressing our appreciation of the bus service we have had this winter. WASHINGTON SQUARE

Editor Gazette-Transcript:

Now it is said that the pride of Washington Square merchants has had a fall, because there is a business site in Jackson Square assessed higher per square foot than any of those in Washington Square.

But then 71 cents is low for the Ludden lot, and the same is true of most of the other estates, for there were only eight lots in the Gazette list of sixty last week that are valued over $2000

Washington Square is fast becoming a business center, and the fact that it is congested, makes the land valuable. The writer believes a valuation of $1 per foot would not be unreasonable for all the lots on the easterly side, from the Braintree line to the postoffice, and on the westerly side from the Braintree line to bank building now used by the Weymouth Savings Bank.

Then the valuation on the westerly side of Washington street should drop to 60 or 50 cents to the Weston estate.

That part of the Weston estate fronting on Weshington street is worth more than 4 cents, probably 25 cents, and if the average was 10 cents, the 161,500 feet would be valued at $16,000 instead of $5975, and the ten acres taxed to William Endicott, trustee, would be worth $50,000 instead of $8700.

Should any of the other lots on Washington street, between Front street and Lincoln Square be assessed below 20 cents?

Yet Gazette figures show one as low as 3 cents, another 4 cents, and a third at 5 cents.

The Jacoby lot near Washington Square at 6 cents seems ridiculously low, particularly as it is a corner lot, and the lot of Mr. Pray above Lincoln Square is assessed at 8 cents

The lot of Clara D. Bates near Combination 3 house at 35 cents is taxed more than the lot occupied by the Gem theatre, or the Catler lot, or the Price lot, or the store lot of Mrs. Smith, and others directly in Washington Square.

Wish Gazette readers might have had more of the land values on Commercial street between Washington Square and the depot for comparison Most of them seem too low, especially the Cowing estate, but as this is new church property it is probably exempt.

I shall look forward with interest to assessed values at Columbian Square and Thomas Corner, and hope other values in Ward Three will be printed. Heretofore I have not thought it necessary to publish a valuation book, but am now convinced there is a demand for it, and that it would increase the valuation of Weymouth, thereby reducing the tax rate.

LINCOLN

AMERICAN LEGION AUXILIARY

Weymouth Unit, 79, American Legion Auxiliary, held its regular meeting at G. A. R. hall Monday evening, April 2, with a good attendance of members.

Mrs. John Riley, chairman of welfare and hospitalization committee, read her report of last visit to West Roxbury Hospital. Mrs. Riley called especial attention to the need of victrola records. Anyone who wishes to add to the enjoyment of these boys in the hospital can do so by telephoning her (Wey. 0533M) that they have some records for this worthy cause and arrangements will be made to collect them promptly. The next visit to the hospital will be made on Tuesday, April 10.

At the last Norfolk County council meeting it was reported that the radio set for the boys at Norfolk County Tubercular hospital, Braintree, cost $350 and had been fully subscribed.

The president, Mrs. Warren, brought up a subject which we are greatly interested in. The American Legion throughout the nation is endeavoring to raise a fund of more than $100,000 to be invested so as to yield an income sufficient to insure that on every Memorial Day, for all time to come, flowers and wreaths shall be placed on every American grave overseas in the name of the American Legion and the American people. The American Legion Weekly of March 30, states "Thus, in 1973, as in 1923, our honor, our respect and our remembrance will be accorded our comrades who sleep on foreign soil and as we march to our own cemeteries, in our cities and towns here at home, it will be a satisfaction to know that thousands of miles away, our duty is being equally performed". The Weekly is publishing a list of contributions on one dollar or over, and the names of these contributors are to be preserved in the archives as a reminder of a duty well performed. It is quite likely that many people in the town of Weymouth will be interested in this fund and will wish to subscribe; the Post or the Auxiliary will be pleased to hear from any one who wishes to make a contribution either through the organization or as a direct contribution.

The entertainment committee have started rehearsals for their play "Sunshine" to be given sometime in May. The date will be announced later. A "Chinese engagement" was staged at this meeting.

Sergeant at Arms Mrs. Draper announced appointments for 1923 color bearers: Miss Grace Donovan, Miss Marion Melville. Miss Ina Rosnell. Mrs. Violet Haviland.

Past President Mrs. Annie J. Libby reported that the permanent charter of the unit had reached her. A committee to carefully check the names to be enrolled on this charter were appointed by the president, viz: 1922 officers Mrs. Libby, Mrs. Haviland, Miss Dexheimer; 1923 officers, Mrs. Warren, Mrs. Haviland, Mrs. Easton. Members of the unit are urgently requested to get in touch with the secretary at 166 Middle street, East Weymouth (telephone Weymouth 0752M) to ascertain if names are correctly given and spelled so that their names may be accurately inscribed on the charter.

A most delightful social and dance were provided for the entertainment of Auxiliary members by the membrs of the Post. Music was furnished by American Legion Band, under the leadership of William Ventre. This band is to give a concert on April 18 to be broadcasted on the radio from Shepherd's stores. Listen in that night and hear our band.

Officers Elected by Citizens Association

The Citizens Association of Precinct Four held its annual meeting Tuesday evening. From the reports read it has been a successful year for the Association from every stand point. This small but industrious and public spirited community center has at the close of its first year, April, 1923, created a fine feeling of fellowship and friendliness—helped itself and helped others. In fact from nothing to reasonable affluence has been accomplished in eight months. The first baked bean supper last July, undertaken with many handicaps, the Association then having neither a dish, a chair, a table, and only the use of a hall by permission of the Selectmen, was followed by a carnival and block party staged on the green at Nash's Corner that rivaled the Weymouth Fair. The carnival made money. It paid for the bracing of the floor of the Engine House hall; it bought chairs, dishes, silver, a gas stove, and other essentials. As a get-together for that part of the town it was unprecedented

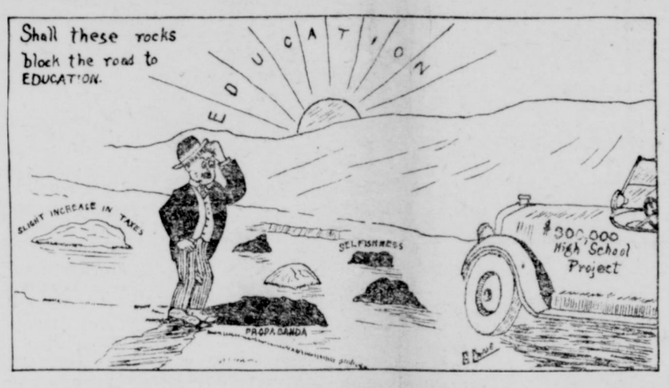

Indeed there is no tonic like success. In meteoric fashion followed band concerts, suppers, dances, each netting running expenses plus.

The ultimate stage of gratification was reached when by the unanimous vote of the Town Meeting Members the present building was given to the Association, the town of course reserving the right to use the building when it wished and the building to revert again to the town in the event of the dissolution of the Association.

The Association having successfully organized and equipped itself it hopes to broaden out another year and take upon its shoulders its object —to promote the public welfare of Precinct Four and the Town of Weymouth.

The courtesy of another year of service was extended to the present incumbants of office, namely: president, Richard Halloran; vice-president, Alfred S. Tirrell; treasurer, Marshall P. Sprague; secretary, Mrs. Frederick H. Andrews. Some necessary changes were made in the board of directors and the new board is as follows: Samuel S. French, Charles DeRusha, Mrs. Mary Tirrell, Miss Katherine Melville, and A. B. Richardson. A planning board to arrange the future policies and activities of the Association was organized with John F. Robinson as its chairman; Mrs. John Sullivan, Arthur Hawes, Charles DeRusha, and Forrest Torrey to work with him.

The Association has officially adopted a name for the hall they are now using, carrying out the original organization idea of a meeting place for its citizens. From now on the building on Front street, in early days Hose House 4, is to be known as "Citizens Hall"

By Laws of New Business Mens Association

At the second meeting of the new Business Men's Association at Weymouth a large number were in attendance to complete the organization.

With temporary chairman Hall presiding the first business was the report of the By-Laws committee. The report was approved as a whole then each article taken up separately and the whole finally accepted as the guide to the new Association.

Several of the articles provoked a little discussion the following members taking part, Messrs Clark, Edward Jordan, and (Rev.) Justice, Pflaumer, and Kempl.

The longest discussion came over Article 4, the membership fee, which was enlivened with a little repartee, many of the members taking part, including Messrs Hall, Clarke, Kempl Harris, Dill, (Rev.) Holland, and (Rev.) Justice, Dunning

The new officers elected are:

President—Howard P. Hall

Vice President—Chester P. Howe

Secretary—Donald Wilbur

Treasurer—Arthur Hammond

Executive committee—Edward A. Hunt, Joseph Kelley, Charles A. on the Mexican borderU. 'mglo Price, and Chester H. Rogers

The by-laws as adopted are as follows:

ARTICLE I.—NAME

The name of this organization shall be Business Men's Association of Weymouth and East Braintree.

No Injunction on High School Building

Judge Crosby of the Superior court dismissed yesterday the petition to restrain the Selectmen of Weymouth from issuing bonds to the amount of $250,000 for the enlargement of the High school building.

Judge Crosby says there was no illegality on any of the four questions raised.

The Gazette is indebted to Town Counsel Holbrook and Supt. Pearson for a copy of the decision.

Findings of Fact, Rulings of Law and Order for Decree

This is a petition in equity brought by not less than ten taxable inhabitants of the Town of Weymouth, under G. L. c. 40, sec. 53, to restrain respondents from taking action under a vote passed at a special town meeting held on February 26, 1923, at which meeting it was voted to appropriate $50,000 for the purpose of making alterations and improvements in the high school of the town and for furnishing equipment therefor, made necessary by such alterations, and at which meeting it was also voted that $250,000 be appropriated for constructing and furnishing an addition to the present high school building.

It was also voted at said meeting to authorize the treasurer of the town, with the approval of the Selectmen, to borrow a sum not exceeding $250,000 to meet said appropriation and to issue bonds or notes therefor, payable in accordance with G. L. c. 44, sec. 19.

The town has accepted St. 1921, c. 61, and was acting thereunder at the time when the meeting referred to in the bill was held.

Before the meeting held on February 12, the vote referred to a meeting was held on Feb. 12, at which a similar vote was passed at a representative town meeting.

At the meeting held on February 26, the foregoing measure was submitted to the voters at large by ballot and was ratified and adopted by 1161 voting "Yes" and 810 voting "No".

The petitioners allege that the action of the town was illegal for the following reasons: "(a) That the warrants for all town meetings shall not posted' seven days at least before the date fixed for the meeting as required by section 2 of the by-laws of the town".

It appears from the agreed facts, that the by-laws provide "that the warrents for all town meetings shall be posted seven days before the date fixed for the meeting", that the warrant was duly posted by a constable of the town of Weymouth in the required number of precincts in said Town of Weymouth, on the nineteenth day of February one thousand nine hundred and twenty-three", then follows the form of the ballot, appearing on the warrant, which form is printed in the agreed statement of facts under "Referendum Question".

I am of the opinion and rule that the meeting was posted according to the By-Laws.

"(b) That the ballot submitted at said meeting was not in conformity with Section 8, Chapter 61, Acts of 1921, in that it carried a modifying paragraph which did not appear on the clerk's record of the previous meeting."

I find and rule that the question stated on the ballot submitted to the voters was substantially in the same language and form in which it was stated when presented to the representative town meeting by the moderator, and as it appears upon the records of said representative town meeting, and was in accordance with St. 1921, c. 61, sec. 8.

"(c) That the resulting vote (1161 yes — 810 no) at said meeting was not the necessary two-thirds required by the General Laws relating specifically to municipal finance (Chapter 44 Sections 2 and 7)."

I rule that provisions of G. L. c. 44, secs. 2, 7, are not applicable to the vote in question as it is expressly provided by St. 1921, c. 61, sec. 8, that questions submitted under that statute shall be determined "by vote of a majority of the voters at large voting thereon".

"(d) That members of the appropriation committee which recommended issuing the High School notes or bonds were not chosen in conformity with Section 5, Chapter 61, Acts of 1921".

I find and rule that the members of the appropriation committee were duly appointed in accordance with section 1 of article 3 of the by-laws, and that they were not appointed contrary to St. 1921, c. 61, sec. 5.

As it does not appear that there was any illegality in the matters set forth in the petition, it is to be entered accordingly.

JOHN C. CROSBY.

GRANITE TRUST AGAIN BEATS ITS SPEED RECORD

Mails Statement to Bank Commissioner 35 Minutes from Notice of Call

The Bank Commissioner makes a call on the banks for a statement five times a year, and there is some rivalry to see which bank mails first to its bank correspondents and others folders showing the condition as of the day of the call.

Yesterday at 20 minutes of 9, the Granite Trust received notice of the call and at 15 minutes past 9, the printed statement was in the Quincy postoffice addressed to the Bank Commissioner.

At 10 o'clock a telegram was received from the American Bankers Association giving notice of the call —three-quarters of an hour after the Granite Trust Company had its statements mailed

On each of the five previous calls the Granite Trust Company has mailed its statement in less than one hour; the quickest previous time being 48 minutes

As far as can be learned, there is no other bank in New England or in the country that mails its statements so quickly.

SKILLED LABOR

The New York Times recently expressed the average man's reaction to the news as colored by the paper he reads: If it agrees with what he himself believes, it is true: if it conflicts with it, it is propaganda. However, the editorial, entitled "Crimes of the Press" is interesting from other angles, and we reprint it is follows:

"Breathes there the man with soul so dead who never to himself hath said, I could run a newspaper, or all the newspapers, better than the subsidized and incompetent scoundrels who are doing it now? If so, we have never met him. However complete and evident a failure he may be as a business man, a citizen, a husband and a father, there is one point on which the average man will admit of no doubt whatever—his ability to manage a newspaper.

"It must be admitted that editors invite some of this critirism by the very nature of their calling, which requires them to make comments on the shortcomings of public men. Very likely the editor of the Marion Star for example, when he retires to private life, will be rather more lenient in his comments on harassed executives. Nevertheless, we venture to believe that even the production of a newspaper is a form of skilled labor, and not so easy as it looks.

"The truth is that most readers, and certainly most readers of the class which is so free with criticism, have only one criterion for the accuracy of news comment, or interpretation. If is agrees with the reader's previous opinion, it is true; if it conflicts with that opinion, it is a piece of lying propaganda and the paper has been bought by British gold or Bolshevist gold".

Keen Sense of Smell.

J. L. writes that while he was riding on an East Boston tunnel car a little boy in the seat in front of him said to his mother "Oh, mamma, I know we are under the water now, for I can smell the fish.—Boston Evening Transcript.

ADVERTISING

The advertising of American business in American monthlies and weeklies amounts to about $150,000,000 a year, and newspaper advertising to about $650,000,000 a year, $800,000,000 in all, which is about as high as the bill for America's chewing gum, or lip sticks, rouge, and powder.

The value of what the United States produces amounts to about $40,000,000,000, and this advertising bill of $800,000,000 is therefore only about two percent of the total amount of goods produced. Advertising is an important and essential element in distribution. It is more than that,—it is the self-expression of business enterprise, and keeps it wholesome.

Russia tried the abandonment of advertising, and found that advertising and business both departed together.

SOUTH WEYMOUTH VALUES

Editors Gazette-Transcript:

Residents of South Weymouth would resent the statement of anyone that South Weymotuh was a "cheap place", yet the Assessors' books for 1921 show that only 18 lots of land on Pleasant street in the vicinity of Columbian Square are valued at over 10 cents per square foot. Only five of these are assessed over 20 cents.

Possibly the Fogg Opera House is not a good paying investment on $28,700 as assessed, or even $40,000 or $50,000, but nevertheless a building which houses the Weymouth Trust Company, the South Weymouth Savings Bank, the South Weymouth postoffice, the Norfolk Club and a grocery store on the first floor, and a large hall or opera house on the second floor, should come pretty near being the most valuable site in South Weymouth, particularly as it is a corner lot surrounded by public library, churches, a park, and other store buildings, situated at the intersection of the car line between Braintree and Rockland, and the bus line between East Weymouth and Pond Plain.

The Fogg Opera lot should be more valuable per foot than the Orpheum theatre lot.

The new lot of the South Weymouth Savings Bank probably cost double the price for which it is assessed, for it is worth over 25 cents, also the Clapp lot, the Willis lot and the Hanson lot.

Other estates on the northerly side of Pleasant street, to the Odd Fellows building are undervalued. And the same is true of the land on the southerly side of Pleasant street between Independence Square and Curtis avenue.

A very low valuation prevails on both sides of Pleasant street between Columbian Square and St. Francis church, some at one cent, some at 2 cents, and two at less than one cent

BUNGALOW

VALUATION BOOK

Editor Gazette-Transcript:

The writer quite agrees with "Lincoln" that Weymouth needs a valuation book. Assessed values of every lot of land and every building should be printed in book form at least once in ten years. A valuation book is more needed than a poll list, and would not cost the town as much, as it would result in a large increase in assessed valuation.

What few installments of land values the Gazette-Transcript has printed proves this conclusively for unless the writer is greatly mistaken several lots of land will be assessed more this year than in 1922.

Taxpayers of Weymouth are indebted to the Gazette for the excellent manner in which these land values have been presented, as considerable painstaking research work must have been necessary to obtain lists of owners on any street, and follow up these lists with the addition of area, value of land and value of buildings thereon. Particularly, as estates are changing owners every year, and it is impossible to keep the Assessors' maps up to date. Keep up the good work, Mr. Editor.

While reading the letter of "Lincoln" my eyes often drifted back to the parallel column,—an editorial from the Cambridge Tribune,—which advocated support of the home paper. It told what pasers elsewhere have done for the home town; how they had DEVELOPED Salem as a trading center; how the plan would be worth extra MILLIONS to Cambridge; how much might be ACCOMPLISHED for Weymouth if the Gazette had good financial backing from the banks, the corporations and the merchants of Weymouth, and was able to extend its field and make Weymouth a trading center for the South Shore.

More trade for Weymouth merchants; they should not let a few do all the advertising, and the boosting of Weymouth. Just a bit selfish to "Let George do it". The Gazette-Transcript is doing good work for Weymouth; it deserves the financial support of all Weymouth merchants. Advertise! Advertise big!! Cooperation should be the watchword.

Just a suggestion:—Merchants of Washington Square should take a page of the home paper at least once a month for a "Dollor Day", a "One-Cent Sale", or a "Bargain Day".

BACKACHE IS DISCOURAGING
But Not So Bad If You Know How to Reach the Cause.

Nothing more discouraging than a constant backache. Lame when you awaken, pains pierce you when you bend or lift. It's hard to work or to rest. Backache often indicates bad kidneys. Weymouth people recommend Doan's Kidney Pills. Ask your neighbor!

Peter Fowler, 10 Eliot St., Weymouth, says: "I suffered from a lame back and my kidneys acted irregularly. Doan's Kidney Pills made my back well and since using Doan's, my kidneys have acted regularly."

Nearly three years later, Mr. Fowler said: "I always keep Doan's Kidney Pills handy because they never fail to relieve any attacks of backache I have."

BRIDGE ASSESSMENT

The assessment of $44,316.29 which the town of Weymouth is called upon to pay toward the cost of the Quincy avenue bridge becomes due and payable June 1.

If put into the current tax levy it will call for a tax of nearly $3 per $1000 as $1 on the valuation of $15,464,527 will raise $15,464.53.

With the $50,000 payment on account of High school enlargment, it looks like a high tax rate in Weymouth for 1923.

FOOD FAIR

Weymouth grocers have been prominent this week in the second food fair of the Old Colony Grocers and Provision Dealers Association held in Braintree Town Hall.

The upper and lower floors as well as the stage have been used for exhibit, and 65 firms, representing business houses in the Old Colony district, have splendid displays there.

In addition to local business houses there are exhibits from the standard food supply manufacturers as well as the makers of electrical machines used in stores and butcher shops. The interior of the halls is massed with flags, the walls, ceilings and booths being draped in the National colors.

The various exhibitors were generous in giving away samples of their goods, especially those in the foodstuffs line.

On the right of the main entrance is a large painting of a log cabin at Plymouth with a realistic country scene around it. This decoration was for the purpose of emphasizing the Old Colony district which the fair represents.

QUINCY THEATRE

Miss Agnes Connelly of East Milton well known resident of that town, is in the strong supporting cast surrounding Alice Terry and Ramon Novarro in "Where the pavement ends", showing at the New Quincy theatre on Monday, Tuesday, and Wednesday of next week. Miss Connelly entered "show business" by accident and is one of the best known performers on the screen. Her father John Connelly is to be the special guest of the management at the first run of the picture Monday.

THOMAS' CORNER LAND VALUES

The most valuable land at North Weymouth is not at Thomas Corner, the end of the zone limit of the Quincy street railway, but at Bicknell Square, the Anna S. Newton lot of 6405 square feet, which was assessed in 1922 at a little rising 14 cents.

The lot upon which stands the Collyer store at Thomas Corner, is second, being valued at a little less than 13 cents. The Sweeney lot at the corner of Sea and North streets is valued a little over 12 cents, and the Cushing lot at the corner of Athens street at less than 12, and the Perkins lot nearly opposite Newton street at a little less than 12.

Only ten lots in the list below (which includes Sea street and a part of Bridge street) are assessed at 10 cents or over. The lowest per foot is the estate of Elias S. Beals which with back land includes about nine acres which is assessed at less than one and one-third cents per square foot.

Seabury lot on North street at less than 9 cents; the Seabury lot on the corner at less than 9; the Thomas lot, Collyer lot, and Sidelinger lots at less than 8; the Abbie E. Beals lot at less than 4 cents; the Estate of Elias S. Beals at less than one and one-third cents; the Greez lot at corner of Crescent road at less than 4.

The corner lot of Mary T. Whiting is assessed below 8 cents; one of the Litchfield lots at less than 10, and the other at 7½ cents.

The Tutty lot at the corner of Pearl street with public library and store at 7 cents; one Newton lot at 14 and the other at 7 cents.

The Dr. Drake lot is assessed at 8 cents; the Walker lot at 8; the Perkins lot at less than 12; the Alger at 9; the French at 9; one of the Wilde lots at less than 9 and the other at the corner of Standish street at less than 10.

The Otis lot on the other corner of Standish street at 8, and the large Bates lot of 324,000 sqaure feet at four and one-sixth cents.

SEA STREET, NORTH SIDE

Beginning again at North street, the lots on the North side of Sea street are assessed as follows:

Sweeney lot at 12 cents; Saville lot at less than 9, and Collyer store lot at less than 13; the Trussell lot at 9, and the Cushing lot at the corner of Athens street at less than 12.

The Shaw lot on the other corner of Athens street is valued at 10 cents, and the next lot of Litchfield at 7½ cents.

The Bartlett store is assessed at less than 8 cents, the Ames lot next door at less than 11; the Brayshaw lot at less than 8; the Spear lot at less than 6; and the Whiting lot adjoining Beals Park at less than 8

The Newton lot adjoining Beals park is valued at 11 cents; the Bastey lot at less than 7; the George L Newton lot at less than 11.

The Beal lot at the corner of Bridge street, on which are located the Hearn drug store and other stores, is valued at 9 cents; the Kuplast lot corner of Newton street at less than 8 cents.

The Aldridge store lot is valued at 10 cents; the Grant garage lot at 8 cents, and the Cheverie corner lot at 9 cents.

The Litchfield corner lot is assessed at 9 cents, the Keene lot at less than 7; the Sladen corner lot at less than 7; the Hunting lot at less than 9; the next lot of the Sladen's at less than 7, the Thornton garage lot at 9, and the Wells corner lot at 9.

In the summary below the Assessors figures for 1921 show the area of each lot, the assessed value of the lot, and the value of the buildings on each lot:

"You say," I suggested, "that Slyke was killed about two o'clock in the morning. The girl might have come to the house and killed him; then gone back to her uncle's, and told the story about being afraid to go through the woods alone. She said it was three o'clock when he came with her to the house. That's a good alibi, of course; but suppose she had been to the house once before. The dog didn't bark, because he knew her. She was also in the house when the revolver disappeared. If you claim the taking of the gun was foolish, why can it not be said to be the kind of an illogical thing a woman would do? The average man would know it was no use to remove the gun. You remember how startled the aunt was when she saw the girl."

Bartley had listened with an amused smile that grew broader as I talked. Though I had not been serious when I began, the more I thought of the idea the more plausible my suggestion sounded. Bartley himself had said that in the case we must build up a theory first, and then see if the facts would fit it.

When I had ended, he said that he himself had, at first, considered the possibility of the girl's having done it, but had decided against it. He reminded me that Slyke had been killed on the balcony, and carried down two flights of stairs, and that Slyke weighed one hundred and fifty pounds, the girl not a hundred. Remembering that and the task it was to carry such a heavy weight down so many stairs, did I still think the girl could have done it?

My face turned red with chagrin, and, seeing that I was hurt, he smiled at me kindly and apologized.

"I didn't intend to hurt your feelings, Pelt. You are like all newspaper men, you enjoy building up a story out of nothing. In this affair, we mustn't let ourselves get sidetracked. We shall need all the clear thinking we can do."

Anxious to redeem myself, I said, "John, we have been going on the theory that some one from outside came into the house and killed Slyke, a mysterious visitor who arrived after Lawrence had left. Perhaps the murderer was hiding in the house all the time."

He gave me an interested look and an approving nod.

"Suppose," I went on, "that the murderer was on the balcony. It was a good place to hide. It was so dark up there that he could not have been seen from the ground. Then let us assume that Slyke heard a sound above him, when he was in the room below the balcony, and went up to see what it was. The person may have made the sound on purpose to attract his attention. At any rate, when he does come out on the balcony, he is killed."

Bartley did not speak for a while, turning my suggestion over in his mind. Then he answered, "You may be right. It is possible that some one was waiting for him to come upstairs. But do not forget that, if that is so, the person would have had to wait there for a long time; for he could not tell when Slyke would come into the room below the balcony. Still, your suggestion is well worth keeping in mind."

Although he spoke so favorably of my idea, I could see that he did not really agree with me.

I yawned and Bartley glanced at his watch. It was after three, and we should have been in bed several hours ago. He rose, and taking two objects from his pocket placed them on the desk. I leaned over to see what they were.

Lying black and sinister on the dark mahogany surface were the revolver that had been taken from Slyke's hand and hidden in the vault, and a little cork stopper, its end covered with red wax that showed where a knife had been used on it.

"Look," Bartley said, pointing at them with a laugh. "The sole result of a day's work. The only clues we have are before us. One is a revolver that did not have a finger print on it; the other a little stopper that might have come from anywhere. From these we have to discover the murderer."

Again he laughed. I stood looking at the two objects, thinking how insignificant they were and wishing they could speak and tell their story. Catching my mood, his face grew grave. He stood looking at them for a moment, then with a sudden gesture swept them into a small box saying, "We ought to have been in bed hours ago."

I had reached my room and was pulling down the bed covers when he called to me. I returned to his room and found him sitting on the edge of his bed taking off his shoes.

"I forgot to tell you, Pelt, that when we reach the solution of this murder, somehow or other whisky will be mixed up with it. When you told me that Slyke had been selling whisky to his friends, I knew that something was wrong. The finding of the liquor in his own vault makes me more certain. He must have known that that whisky was there. Why, under heaven, a man that had the money Slyke was presumed to have had, should secrete whisky on his grounds is more than I know."

"But," I reminded him, "you say he did not have as much money as people thought he had."

"Yes, that is true. The lawyer confirmed what I had heard about his losses. Whisky and Slyke had a good deal in common, you will find."

He yawned, and I started again for my room. As I reached the door he added, "Black thinks the chauffeur killed Slyke. Maybe he did. Still"—and he laughed—"I never saw a man with a square head that knew very much. And that detective certainly has a square head."

And with that absurd remark in my mind, I went to bed.

CHAPTER VIII

The Inquest Opens.

It was only natural, after the lateness of the hour at which I went to bed, that I should oversleep the next morning. It was well after nine before I entered the breakfast room; I found no one there but a servant who told me that the others had eaten some time before. When I had finished my breakfast I went in search of Bartley, and found him in the sun parlor surrounded by a mass of newspapers. He waved to me and went on reading.

The inquest was not to be held until one o'clock; and I wondered what Bartley wanted me to do with my morning. As if in answer to my thought, he looked up and said he was going into Saratoga on some errands, and suggested that I go with him and interview the girl friend with whom Ruth had intended to spend the night.

The first place we stopped on our arrival in town was at a large drug store, where Bartley asked to see the proprietor. When he appeared, Bartley placed a small object on the counter before him.

"Can you give me any idea," he asked, "what sort of a bottle that cork came from?"

The object was the little stopper with the red wax which he had showed me the night before. Picking it up, the druggist looked at it very carefully. He turned it over in his hand, scratched the wax with a knife, and took so long in replying that I thought he never would speak.

He Suggested That, If It Were Murder, Someone From Saratoga Might Have Committed the Crime.

"I think I can," he said at last. "The little cork not only had its top covered with red wax, but the wax ran down the sides of the bottle. In order to get it open, it was necessary to cut the wax away. It looks to me as if it came from a Park Graham bottle."

"You mean the drug firm?" Bartley asked.

"Yes. I will show you."

He went behind the screen and returned in a second with a little bottle in his hand. It was but a few inches long, and the cork stopper was covered in the same manner with red wax, and part of it had run down the sides of the bottle. It was the mate to the stopper that Bartley had found. Bartley examined the bottle carefully, noted the label, and returned it to the druggist.

When we were again in the automobile, Bartley said, "I wish I were as sure what that stopper was doing in that room as the druggist is of the kind of a bottle it came out of."

Bartley's real object in coming to town was, however, to visit the jail and find out from Roche whether the chauffeur had told what he knew or not. I left him at the jail door, promising to return within an hour, and went in search of the young woman with whom Slyke's step-daughter had expected to spend the night.

When I found her, Miss Morton bore out all that Ruth had said about the way she had happened to go home the night of the murder. They had been to a dance together, and on the way back the car had broken down near the entrance to the Slyke estate. Ruth said, as she was so near, she might as well go home. One of the young men had gone with her to the little cottage where her uncle lived. He had waited until the old man had come downstairs, and had then rejoined his party. Ruth's story had been true, and I saw how very foolish my suggestion to Bartley had been that she might have committed the murder.

When I returned to the jail, about an hour later, I found that Bartley had gone to Doctor King's office, and I followed him there at once. It was the usual physician's office, with cases of instruments along the walls and a flat-top desk in the center of the room. Bartley and the doctor were bending over a small pad when I entered, and Bartley told me that the doctor had been drawing for him a little map of the roads around the Slyke estate. The doctor looked older than when I had seen him first, far more tired and nervous. It took several years to get over shell shock, from which he suffered, he told us, and he had been very foolish to start to practice again so soon after his return from the front. He recounted a few of his war experiences, and they were enough to have broken any man. He said that, as soon as his duties in regard to the Slyke case were over, he was going to take a rest. All the time he talked to us he played with a pencil or tapped the desk in front of him.

We spoke of the inquest, and he told us that he did not need to call a coroner's jury unless he wished. The facts were so complex or so simple—it was hard to say which—that a jury would be confused by them. He admitted that there was no doubt that Slyke had been murdered, but doubted if any jury would bring in a verdict of murder on such slight evidence as we had. He suggested that, if it were murder, some one from Saratoga might have committed the crime. It was not a bad suggestion, and to my surprise Bartley seemed to regard it favorably. The doctor mentioned the chauffeur's arrest, and said that he had only known the man by sight. We talked for an hour or more, then returned home.

Bartley was in his room changing his suit for luncheon, when a telephone call came for him. When he returned he told me that the call had been from Mr. Slyke's lawyer. He had 'phoned him, Bartley said, that among the papers in the safe was an envelope with ten thousand dollars in bills in it, and that the bank had informed him that, on the day of our arrival Slyke had deposited thirteen thousand dollars with them.

While this was interesting news, I could not see that it was of any importance to us, and said as much to Bartley. He half smiled as he reminded me that ten thousand dollars was a lot of money to keep in the house, and added that it was strange that Slyke should deposit thirteen and retain another ten in his house. He wondered if his keeping the money had any relation to the visitor that he was expecting. At any rate, the man had not gotten the money, if that had been what he was after.

Luncheon over, Currie, Bartley and I started for the inquest. The newspapers had evidently received a tip that there was more in Slyke's death than had appeared, for when we arrived we were forced to run a gauntlet of reporters, who recognized Bartley at once and crowded around him. They realized that, if he were interested in the case, it was of more importance than they had suspected, and wanted to know if he did not have some information to give them. With a laugh at their insistence, he replied that he did not; but, when he had, he would see that they were the ones to get it.

There were a number of cars in front of the house and a small crowd of men standing about in twos and threes. Just as we turned to mount the steps, Lawrence drove up and greeted us with a rather forced smile.

The inquest was to be held in the large living room in which the burglars had been found. Though it was not a public hearing open to every one, there were a goodly number of people present.

Doctor King and the other officials had not yet arrived; and Black, who was talking to a group of men, left them and came to greet us. He told us that the chauffeur, Briffeur, was to be brought from the jail by Roche, and that he thought his testimony would make a sensation. Bartley seemed to understand what he meant, though I did not. The chauffeur had refused to talk and had answered all questions by saying that he would tell what he knew at the inquest. All attempts to find out what that might be had failed.

Bartley asked Black if he still thought that the chauffeur was guilty of the murder. Black countered by stating that he did not believe that anyone else knew as much about the affair as he did. It was his opinion that, if the chauffeur had not killed him, he at least knew something about the crime. One thing the man had admitted when questioned, and that was that, when he testified, he would ruin several reputations. Bartley was much interested, and told Black that he wished he would ask Roche not to bring Briffeur into the courtroom until it was time for him to give his testimony.

MORE gorgeous thrills, more daring adventures, more brilliant beauty than you've ever seen on the screen before. The famous story of the love that dared a hundred deaths. A romance that sweeps the seven seas for thrills. Two great stars in the best roles they've ever had.

ROTARY CLUB ORGANIZED

Every town needs a Rotary Club, and Braintree now has one with a good list of officers and members. At a meeting Monday evening these officers were elected:

President—Gustave A. Bergfors

Vice President—Stacey B. Southworth

Scribe—C. Edward Fisher

Sergeant at Arms—Walter B. Carson

Champion Weight Carrier.

In a dockers' weight-carrying competition in France the winner carried a burden of 716 pounds a distance of 13 yards.

MONDAY CLUB DRAMATICS

Again in their annual dramatics the Monday club have demonstrated their ability in stage amateur dramatics of real merit. On Monday evening Odd Fellows Opera House was filled with club members and their guests to enjoy the production of "Billeted", and hearty applause and laughter were given the many witty sallies in the course of the play. The plot centered around the desertion of Mrs. Taradine by her husband. Mrs. Arthur A. Corthell played the charming "widow", and her work in this part, which was particularly long, was very fine indeed. The part of the husband, known as Captain Rymill, who appeared on the scene at the very inopportune moment when his wife had sent a telegram to herself announcing his death, was ably handled by Mrs. Edward P. Hunt.

Mrs Frederick L. Alden was Penelope Moon, close friend of Mrs. Taradine and as usual she fitted into her part without any appearance of acting it.

Mrs. Herbert Rockwood caused much amusement as Mr. McFarlane, the bank manager who had gotten himself in an embarrassing position by honoring checks which Mrs. Taradine naively acknowledged writing without funds to cover.

Mrs. George Ames as Rev. Ambrose Liptrott, vicar in the small and provincial English community, and Mrs. Ralph S. Wilder as his narrow minded and meddlesome sister made an interesting pair and played their parts exceedingly well.

Colonel Preedy, gallant and popular with the ladies, was played by Mrs. Harry A. Mattson, who took her part well.

Mrs. Clarence P. Steeves as Mrs. Brace, the cook, and Mrs. Henry J. Starr, as Rose the maid, completed the cast.

The work of the coach, Miss Myrna Chamberlain, was very evident in the smoothness and finish with which the play proceeded. All three acts were given in the morning room of the establishment of Mrs. Taradine, which was a tastefully arranged scene. The play itself was somewhat heavier and more ambitious than the majority of amateur performances, and of course ended with everyone "living happily ever after" but many amusing and complicated situations arose before this very much to be desired climax was reached.

All who worked for the success of the occasion certainly deserve congratulations for the result of their labors. The cast was:

Mrs. Edward P. Hunt

Colonel Preedy
Mrs. Harry A. Mattson

Rev. Ambrose Liptrott
Mrs. George Ames

—The Girls club met at the home of Mrs. Parker Farren on last Monday. After a very pleasant evening of sewing, delightful refreshments were served.

—A supper and entertainment will be held at the First church chapel this evening under the auspices of the choir of the church. It is hoped that a goodly number will be present.

Clark, founder of C. E., Russell J. Blair, field secretary; Florence B. Nash, ex-president of Clark Union and many more. Copies of this paper should be in the hands of their friends. KNOCKS AND BOOSTS

By Nick Quad

There seems to be a lack of good pitchers in Weymouth. A good baseball team can nearly always be built around a good battery. A good battery breeds confidence in the fielders and each player is on his toes ready to do his best that he may not be charged with the loss of a baseball game. Good hitting counts for naught if the pitcher wobbles, especially in the amateur or "semi-pro" games where one man is called upon to assume the pitching burden, and is compelled to go through the entire game even though his arm goes bad. Generally there is no one to take his place, consequently the baseball game degenerates into a farce or comedy. There is opportunity for the youth who can develop a good curve, control, and some speed. Pitchers of promise in Weymouth in the past ten years can be counted on one hand.

A 14-year-old boy of East Weymouth owned a chicken that suffered from roupe and he was in a quandary to know what to do, saying he had given it everything to effect a cure, but without success. When asked what he had given to the sick chicken he named among other things "Aspirin tablets", and did not see anything funny when his questioner burst into laughter. A new use for that article.

The shortage of houses in Weymouth is acute and it will be a blessing when some more up-to-date houses are put up for people to live in. Old shacks without improvements or repairs of any kind are bringing high prices today because people have to live somewhere.

The coming fracas between Felix Suey of Rockland and Basil Warren of East Weymouth, wrestlers, has got the sports all excited. Charley Cotter says there will be "some fireworks" when the pair come to grips.

COCHATO CLUB

Wednesday evening, April 4, a number of out-of-town young people were guests at a dance given by the young set of Braintree at Cochato hall. Among the patronesses were Mrs. Horace R. Drinkwater, Mrs. William Harrison, Mrs. Eben Prescott, Mrs. Charles M. Bennett, Mrs. Frederick Lawley, Mrs. Edwin R. Olin, Mrs. George H. Wetherbee, Mrs. Arthur Haynes, Mrs. Harry Arnold, Mrs. Irving Bean, Mrs. J. Otis Singleton, Mrs. Herbert Kneeland, Mrs. George F. Ellsworth, Mrs. George Andrew, Mrs. Walter S. Watson, Mrs. Stacy B. Southworth, Mrs. Evelyn Wright Hallett, Mrs. S. H. Durgin, Mrs. W. J. Wilder, Mrs. J. G. Spear, Mrs. Harry W. Hall, Mrs. W. P. Battles, Mrs. Arthur Evans, Mrs. William L. Barnard, Mrs. F. E. M. DAUGHTERS OF VETERANS

The annual convention of the Daughters of Veterans was held in Boston this week with Department president Anna B. Williams and Department secretary Nellie G. Loud of Tent 32 in their respective offices. Department president Anna B. Williams was presented with a diamond ring and other gifts. Both the Department president and Department secretary were presented with gold from Tent 22.

Mary E. Brassil, past president of Tent 32 brought the greetings of the Women's Relief Corps Department to the convention and also presented both the Department president and Department secretary with bouquets from Reynolds Relief Corps, 102.

Thirty members from Tent 32 were present at the first banquet the Department has ever held on the evening of April 10 and a most enjoyable time was had by all.

We all wish our president, Nellie G. Loud, a pleasant trip and a safe return from Bermuda, for which place she sails on Saturday, April 14.

Useful Asset.

A famous lawyer was well known as a delightful reconteur. This gift made him not only a welcome guest, but a valuable member of his own home circle, for it is related that at a dinner party, which he was giving to some friends, his old butler whispered to him: "Sir, you must tell another story. The roast won't be ready for another ten minutes."

Prejudged.

"Folks dat we don't know, but jes' hear about," said Uncle Eben, "allus seems a heap better or a heap wuss dan whut dey is."—Washington Star.

Willing to Make It Unanimous

By MARTHA WILLIAMS

(©, 1922, by McClure Newspaper Syndicate.)

Mariette caught her breath as, unfolding the check that had just dropped from the letter, she saw it was for a hundred dollars. She stared at it doubtfully—the sum was so far past belief. And she had expected nothing beyond the warm thanks rendered by those strange motor folk for the small help she had rendered. She could not understand what had moved her to run out into the highway and tell them of the bridge destroyed, the mile of road left impassable by the recent flood and direct them to the old turnpike high on the hillside, by which they had vanished. Evidently they had got her name from the post box. The note ran:

"Dear Miss Grayson:

"We hope, my brother and I, that you will accept the inclosure, and buy with it something you may care to have and keep, in memory of your immeasurable service to us. But for your kindness, we could not have reached the best of fathers before the end. Please do not think we are offering pay for it—we are only putting ourselves in your place as far as we may; to us a concrete token of a good deed could not be unwelcome.

"Wishing you all the beautiful things you deserve, we ask you to believe us, always,

"Gratefully your friends,
"ALICE and LINDSAY WARE."

Again Mariette caught her breath. So they were not married, as she had thought almost enviously—it must be so fine to go with the one you loved best all through a summer world, with no care beyond roads and weather. No such luck for her—she would die as she had been born, poor, thwarted, hampered by fate and the something within that would not let her flinch from the weight laid upon her. A weight irritatingly commonplace—filling in chinks, stopping gaps in the household that ran so shackly under Aunt Em's sway. If only she had a free hand—but Aunt Em was "tetchy" regarding her prerogatives, also of an explosive temper regarding affronts to her dignity. Mariette stayed with her, an unpaid, unthanked servant, trying to pay a debt she was never allowed to forget—the money Aunt Em had spent to keep Mariette's father comfortable in the hospital until he died of his broken back. That had taken two years, so the charge was really something considerable. But save in her mind, Mrs. Emma Grayson Twyning did not feel it. A childless widow, with a fine farm and money ahead, she had no need even to be thrifty. Thrifty, however, she was—the neighbors said, among themselves, "as close as the bark on a tree." Except toward Luke Twyning, her husband's grandson—him she pampered lavishly, not reckoning the cost.

Mariette got food, good food, clothes that were mostly secondhand, and the ugliest, stuffiest of the upstairs rooms, cramfull of tag-ends of furniture. She had new shoes once a year—Aunt Em's old ones simply would not stay on her small feet. But the shoes came out of the egg money—which Mariette earned several times over, Christmases and birthdays she got five dollar bills. Luke had tried once to thrust a ten into her hand—and had had it returned to him along with a stinging slap. Mariette would not have given it had she dreamed what would come of it. Luke, who had regarded her merely with lordly patronage, developed a keen interest in her upon finding she withstood him.

He was so persistent, latterly so urgent, she had felt there must somehow be a breakaway. Aunt Em would stand by him whatever he might say or do—continuous flouting of him Mariette knew might be dangerous. Until now she had been hopeless of escape. Nobody within walking range would harbor her or give her paying work; her scant savings would not take her far and leave anything over for food and shelter. Not a valuable remained to her. Even her silver pap-spoon and her mother's wedding ring had gone into the maw of hospital expenses. Scanning the check, unseeingly she folded it and slipped the letter inside her blouse, barely in time. As she gathered together the miscellaneous heap of mail resting at her feet, Luke reined in a yard away, saying in lordly manner: "What's there? Anybody left me a million this morning?"

"Were you expecting it?" Mariette asked, handing up to him a letter and turning toward the house.

"Wait," he said imperatively, tearing open the letter: "May have to answer this in a hurry—and you'll have to copy it—I write such a poor fist."

"And your spelling proves you've been through college," Mariette unwisely taunted.

A muttered oath startled her. Luke was tearing the notes to bits, his face livid with passion. "You will have to answer this,—this hussy," he said through set teeth. "I'm going to marry you and show her I wanted her money—not herself."

"There'll be two words—maybe more—to that bargain," Mariette flung back, running away, her hands locked hard above the hiding place of her precious letter.

Suppose it had not come—suppose she had not read it unseen. She shivered at the thought, but when she delivered mail to Aunt Em she was her usual stolid self. Aunt Em buried herself in her favorite story-paper, saying absently: "Go on now and help Mam Dilsey with the peach preserves—and dinner. Better have it late—Luke said he was goin' for all day—but I somehow think he'll be home around two o'clock."

Mariette bowed obediently and ran away. But not to the preserving—instead to her own place. There she dragged out a suitcase, crammed the best and least cumbrous of her clothes inside, put on her newest shoes, then slipped out the back way, losing herself in hazel thickets beyond the orchard, through which she went finally unseen by any eyes to the road leading to the railway.

She never quite knew how she traversed it, how she climbed breathless aboard a train providentially late. But she will never forget the despair that fell on her when a kindly conductor shook his head over the check, in spite of the letter, but offered to carry her at his own risk to the stop nearest Wareham—he knew the place well. He waved away the huddle of silver she tried to force upon him, saying compassionately:

"Keep it—for hard times." To himself he added mentally: "Won't be hard times for her, if she's all right and the check all right. I know the Wares." And thus it came to pass that midafternoon Mariette found herself facing Miss Alice Ware, white and trembling, but saying steadily: "Indeed, indeed! I'm no beggar—If only you'll help me get a start, I can make my way."

She had told her plight. Miss Ware had choked over it a little, but her voice was very clear and soft as she answered: "I am sure of that. It happens, though, we have special need of somebody like you to stay and cherish our dear grandmother. Lindsay and I are forced to leave her for a while, and certainly will not leave her alone. Will you take the place?"

Mariette nodded, because she could not speak, and sank down all but helpless, so great was her relief.

She grew to love Wareham—every stick and stone, its flowery ways, its lawns and shady nooks, even before the owners of it came back. She loved grandma, too—a gentlewoman of the finest, therefore kindly considerate of her companion.

Tactfully she provided proper garments for the girl, rejoicing to see her bloom into beauty betwixt love and an easy mind. Genealogy was her hobby. She talked pedigrees and family half the time. Thus she found out that, through her mother, Mariette was a third cousin, once removed. Which, of course, made all the difference in the world.

Especially after the grandchildren came home. They hardly knew this transformed Mariette, but quickly realized her charm. Six weeks later Alice said after dinner, as the whole family sat around a leaping fire: "We are going to test you, Mariette. Will you of your great kindness do something that grandmamma and I have set our hearts on?"

"Anything, if it means breaking half the Ten Commandments," Mariette laughed back. "Speak! It shall be done!"

"It is only to marry our Lindsay," from Alice.

"What—what does he say?" Mariette gasped, flushing beautifully.

Lindsay took her hand in both his own, answering: "He is more than willing to make it unanimous."

BOTH HELP AND HINDRANCE

Movements of Glacier Have Uncovered and Also Hidden Vast Deposits of Minerals.

Glaciers both help and hinder the miner, says Dr. Milnor Roberts, dean of the Washington State school of mines. The great ice rivers of the past have laid bare rich deposits of ore in passing over the mountains. The mines of British Columbia offer many instances of ores formed at lower depths, but now appearing unweathered at the surface. Their change of relative position has been brought about through erosion and a final sweep by the ice.

But while the glacier has in the ages gone laid bare the riches of the mountain, just as one might cut away half an apple and expose the seeds to view, the surviving glaciers of today do not always help the prospector. A prospector near Doubtful lake, Wash., used to dig through glacial ice for some distance before striking his vein in the solid rock. By next season his tunnel through the ice had moved down the valley a little distance and he had to drive another one. He soon had several useless blind entrances lined up in a row.

Actions of Geysers.

Geysers are not always spouting. They do so, as a rule, at quite regular intervals. They always occur near active or extinct volcanoes. Far below the surface is a "pocket" in the rocks filled with water kept at great heat by the temperature of the soil. Steam is given off continually until the pressure in the "pocket" becomes terrific. Then with the noise of a dozen express trains, a huge column of vapor and water is shot high into the air, where it remains for some moments before sinking again into the basin below.

Advantage of the Artless.

"That tenderfoot says he wants us to teach him to play poker," said Three-finger Sam.

"Tell him to go on his way," rejoined Cactus Joe. "A man who says he doesn't know how to play poker keeps people so busy explainin' the game to him that nobody else has a chance to win anything."

WEYMOUTH, APRIL 13, 1923

PEOPLE HAVE RIGHT TO KNOW

One of the subjects discussed at the recent meeting of the Connecticut Editorial Association was the vague publicity generally given to town notices. Wallace Odell of the Tarrytown News told of the methods now used in that place, and said that "instead of using small type in an obscure place the officials have learned that the people have a right to know, and resort to conspicuous advertising". Evidently the discussion was not without its good effect, for in the current issue of the Darien Review the people of that town are notified in a 10-inch 3-column, front page announcement of the adjourned town meeting to be held this week. Wherever a copy of the Review happened to be—in a house, store, or on a newsstand, it was possible for anyone to see that a town meeting was to be held something which every citizen had a right to be advised of. The Review is to be congratulated on being the first home-town paper to handle this kind of town advertising in Connecticut. Darien has a valuation of a little over $8,000,000 and its population is not quite 4,500.

APRENTICES NEEDED

The Medford Mercury says editorially:

Employers of men are appreciating keenly the need for more and yet more skilled workmen. There is usually an abundance of laborers, and an even greater abundance of white collar men, but there never has been and never will be too many skilled workers, men who are thoroughly familiar with the requirements of their respective trades.

Our public schools are turning out thousands of young men annually whose ambition seems to be to hold a soft job where they may have clean hands, well manicured nails and white collars. Thousands go through college and technical schools and enter business with similar ideals, with the added advantage of having specialized in a particular calling.

Our public schools give a large amount of time to teaching boys certain fundamentals of carpentry, printing or other trade. Very few of these boys become sufficiently interested to take these trades up as a life vocation. Many merely use them as a means of "killing time" and "getting by" their school careers.

Vocational training is a splendid thing when properly applied, but as used today, its benefits may be seriously questioned. Boys who plan to become carpenters, masons, plumbers, steam fitters, or machinists—far better that they enter employment in those lines, receive actual lessons through actual experience and use the educational advantages in their spare time learning bookkeeping, costfinding, estimating, office management and similar work.

Sooner or later the ambitious boy who enters the business world as an apprentice will master his trade and become a skilled worker; he is going to become an employer. He will learn his trade in actual practice. He will require instruction in the ways of managing his business. Such education, if started when the youth is an apprentice, will stimulate him to become an employer, will interest and instruct him along the lines very necessary to a successful business man.

This country does not need white collared men today as much as it needs skilled men. Skilled men, who can acquire higher education to go with their mechanical training, will be the successful men of tomorrow. They will leave the white collared men far behind. They are doing it now.

Not a dozen miles from Medford a big engineering job is under way involving an expenditure of nearly two millions of dollars. The engineer, upon whom the whole responsibility of that job rests, who has spent years and money receiving his technical training, is receiving less pay than any of his foremen, less pay than the poorest paid mechanic on the job and less pay than some of the laborers.

THURSDAY HOLIDAY

Because of the Thursday holiday next week, it is VERY IMPORTANT that advertisements and news stories should be forwarded to the Gazette-Transcript early in the week. If possible, on Monday or Tuesday.

PEOPLE'S FORUM

The columns of the Gazette-Transcript are open to all communications on pertinent subjects. The name of the writer must be forwarded with the letter, not necessarily for publication. The views expressed may or may not be in accordance with those of the Editor, and he takes no responsibility therefor.

Editor Gazette-Transcript:

A sort time ago I saw a picture in a Boston paper of a dump (I think it was in Brookline) in back of some fine looking buildings. It reminded me of the dump in back of Washington Square. The day the wind blew so hard the papers from that dump were seen to blow as high as the top of the adjoining buildings.

I cannot understand why that is not cleaned and why everything is allowed to be dumped there. It is a fire menace.

We have fire chiefs and a board of health and I have seen this dump complained of many times, yet it is the same as ever.

Why is the man who owns the land allowed to let this work go on, while we have officials who are looked to to care for those things! The man who allows it should be looked after. It seems too bad to have to get the State to interfere, but it does seem sometimes as if that would have to be done.

The view of our Washington Square from the railroad bridge would give one a very undesirable idea of our historic town.

PROGRESS

AMERICAN LEGION AUXILIARY

On Tuesday, April 10, the president of Weymouth Unit, Mrs. Warren, with chairman of Welfare and Hospitalization committee, Mrs. Riley, Mrs. M. S. Page and Mrs. Willis M. Rand visited West Roxbury Hospital and added a little cheer to the boys there. The teachers and pupils of the Athens school of North Weymouth provided the good things for this visit. There were oranges, apples, candies and jellies and cash for the welfare fund and the list was headed "For our boys at West Roxbury". The children are deserving of praise for their ready response and enthusiasm in this fine work. Weymouth Unit is very grateful to Mrs. Alan Emery of Weymouth Heights for the use of her automobile for this trip to the hospital.

The next visit of the Welfare committee to West Roxbury will be on the second Tuesday of May. Mrs. Riley (telephone Weymouth 0533M) will be glad to hear from anyone who wishes to donate any victrola records or anything else to this worthy cause. The hospital on the last visit showed that the boys had been generously remembered with flowers at Easter time.

The American Legion each year has a "Daisy Drive". April 13 and 14 have been set aside for the drive this year. It is heartily endorsed by the Governor of the Commonwealth of Massachusetts. This drive is to provide the Legion with funds to help the disabled and needy World War veteran. In many instances it is necessary for these men to be assisted over rough spots. The daisy drive will be conducted by the Auxiliary in the different parts of Weymouth on Saturday morning, April 14. We must all remember how much we were willing to do for these men in 1917—1918 while we were in danger and now we must not forget that the war is not over for many of these men. When the solicitor calls Saturday morning greet her with a smile and a donation and encourage her in the work she is doing, so that we may all feel satisfied with the result of the daisy drive in Weymouth.

SERVICE STAR LEGION

The Old Colony, Service Star Legion, met at the home of the president, Mrs. Albert Avery, on Commercial street, East Braintree, on Monday, April 9, with a large number in attendance. The chapter voted to forward its annual membership fee of $5 to the Army and Navy club of Boston which is doing commendable work for soldiers, sailors, and marines. Plans for Memorial Day work were discussed, a committee appointed and the work partially mapped out. At the close of the meeting a delicious repast of ice cream, cake, and confections was served by the hostess, Mrs. Avery. The next regular meeting will take place on May 14, at the home of Mrs. Jeanette Baker, 328 Union street, South Weymouth.

"To Have and To Hold"

The historic settlement of Jamestown, Va., is graphically pictured in Paramount's "To Have and To Hold" at the Fogg Opera House April 18. In the little rebuilt township, much stirring action takes place and there are many fierce fights with the Indians. Also are depicted many of the customs of the day, including the quaint method by which the settlers obtained their wives.

GEM THEATRE

Three big stars in the greatest comedy of American life ever written will be seen at the Gem theatre Sunday, April 15, in the famous Paramount picture "Clarence", Wallace Reid was never so funny; Agnes Ayers never so beautiful; nor May McAvory so alluring, as in this picture. The next week Mr. Rogers presents another Paramount winner "Adam's Rib". In "Manslaughter" you saw one side of the modern girl; here is the other. To see it is to realize that the Eves of today are quite as much worthy of Adam's love as the Eves of any previous generation. For better understanding of and sympathy with the problems of the girl of today see this wonderful picture.

NORTH WEYMOUTH VALUES

On page six this week will be found the assessed land values on Sea street and Bridge street, at North Weymouth, lot by lot. The area and value is printed.

HOW

MODEST ONION GETS ITS CHARACTERISTIC AROMA.—Onions of moderate size contain about 91 per cent water; they are succulent and tender, and as thoroughly digested and as easily absorbed by the stomach as are other similar vegetables. They are not only rich in vitamines, but have other nutritive and medicinal properties as well. There is in them, for instance, much food iron, good for those suffering from anemia, and very little starch or sugar, which makes them suitable for diabetics.

The sulphur compound which gives them their characteristic aroma, is believed to stimulate the flow of digestive juices, and also to act as a mild laxative. In cooking, much of this acid volatile oil, which is called allyl sulphid and has an effect on the eyes similar to that of tear gas, is lost. That is why cooked onions have so much less taste than raw ones, and also why a silver spoon, if used in stirring them sometimes acquires a black coating, which is silver sulphid.

As an article of trade, onions rank third among the truck crops of the United States, and, in addition to the large home-grown supply, considerably over a million bushels every year are imported, the majority now coming from Spain. Also there used to be heavy imports of this vegetable from Bermuda, but those islands have been losing out in the last few years, principally because so many onions are now grown in Texas. Other localities specializing in the succulent bulb are Ohio, western New York, Connecticut and Coachella valley, in southern California, where a very sweet variety, closely resembling the Egyptian, is being raised.

EFFECTS OF VARIOUS FOODS

How Investigation Has Determined Value of Certain Forms of Nourishment—Some Best Uncooked.

A German investigator has conducted a series of experiments to determine the effects of various foods, beverages, condiments and species, as well as the effect of cooking, chewing and digestion upon the pulse and cardiac (heart) activity, and found that all the foods, accessory foods and spices, with the exception of very acid substances, coffee, tea and cocoa, had a stimulating effect on the heart. Water inhibits the depressive effect of stimulants from heating.

The depressive substances become stimulating after they are heated and water increases the stimulating effect. If the substance tested is applied to the palate the effect is greater than when applied to the mucosa (lining) of the cheek.

Different portions of the same vegetables have different effects. Acids applied to the tongue cause depression of the pulse; applied to the mucosa of the cheek and palate, they cause an increase of the pulse, but applied to the whole oral (mouth) cavity, there is depression of the pulse.

All foods are more stimulating when eaten raw than when cooked. Cold and heat are repressive, and moderate heat has the most stimulating effect.

How Moon Affects Earthquakes.

Earthquakes are more frequent in those parts of the world where there is evidence that geological processes may be slowly shaping the major contours of the earth's surface and where the mountains may be reckoned, geologically, as comparative newcomers. In digging a trench or building an embankment, if the earth is left at too steep a slope it will find its natural one by falling toward its base. An analagous process is suggested by the tremendously steep descent from the Andes to the Pacific ocean. A glance at the map shows that that great range of mountains is almost standing with its feet in the water; as a matter of fact, the slope to the Pacific varies from 1 in 0 to 1 in 30. In calmer regions of the earth's surface the slope from the high land to the sea varies from 1 in 70 to 1 in 250. The simplest explanation of the constantly recurrent earthquakes along the Pacific coast would be the great thrust from a vast mountain range the "batter" of which has not yet reached an angle of repose.—Manchester Guardian.

How Some Insects Walk on Water.

What makes it possible for the long-legged water flea to run right over the surface of a sheet of water? If we observe it closely, says Science Siftings, we see that the end of each of its six long legs make a slight depression where it rests upon the surface. The surface is elastic in fact, and acts like a springy mattress.

The physical basis of this mode of action may be explained as follows: The separate molecules of water cohere with considerable firmness and therefore offer a certain degree of resistance to penetration by any solid matter—but this is true only in case the body cannot be wet, i. e., if it has a composition like that of the fats. The resistance is a result of the surface tension of the liquid, which acts like a stretched membrane. This is sufficient to support the weight of the water flea, though it would be practically negligible for ourselves.

USE THE ZEROS

As the time approaches for placing in service the first machine switching central office in Greater Boston, there is an increased necessity for all subscribers to give numbers to the operator exactly as listed in the Boston telephone directory.

For this reason the zeros which are prefixed to all numbers below 1000 should be given as a part of the telephone number called.

For example, if the number of a Malden subscriber is listed in the directory as 0068W, the four figures should be used, the two zeros being pronounced, "oh, oh".

When a subscriber makes a call for this number after Monday, and fails to use these prefixed zeros, the operator taking the call will say to the subscriber, "Malden 68W has been changed to Malden 0068W".

The prefixed zeros have been printed in the telephone directory for about two years as one of the necessary steps in connection with the introduction of machine switching, the apparatus being so designed that it will operate properly only with a four digit number.

"ALL SUCCESSFUL BUSINESS BASES ON ANALYSIS AND PLAN"

What Does Weymouth Need Today?

Weymouth has its problems—What Are They? Why do They Exist? What is their Solution? How Best to Proceed?

Here is a subject of vital interest to every citizen of Weymouth irrespective of class, race or creed, who feels the pride and enjoys the prestige of Home in this old town.

WHAT DOES WEYMOUTH NEED TODAY? This is not a question for the people at large—a question that "The Gazette-Transcript" is going to ask of its readers; the answers, giving the public's views and suggestions, will be a Special Feature in our columns for months to come.

What Does Weymouth Need Today?

What will add to its population, increase its industries, develop its resources, enhance its prosperity, restore it as a seaport, develop it as a summer resort, bring about a revival of those intimate social relations which foster enjoyment in Games, Theatricals, Concerts, Dances, Contests, Debating Clubs, and any form of recreation which brings together clean hands, clean hearts and plenty of meritorious amusements of all kinds, and attract increasing thousands of visitors in future years.

THESE ARE THE QUESTIONS which The Gazette-Transcript desires answered, and to that end has already asked and shall continue to ask of its readers, their constructive opinions and suggestions on topics of vital importance relative to the best interests of Weymouth. In this way The Gazette-Transcript feels it can best serve its readers, can best shape its editorial policy by learning how the people really feel, and can better move in harmony and unison, straight to its goal; Analysis, Synthesis, Plan, Action.

THESE ALL IMPORTANT QUESTIONS, answered by interested citizens, and their opinions spread before our readers, should make clear many town topics which today are more or less obscure, and should result in placing upon our annual town warrant, constructive articles calculated to be of great benefit to our town.

IN ORDER, HOWEVER, to make this Latest Gazette Feature of greatest benefit to the town we must all wake up, and with the enthusiastic appreciation of the possibilities of the golden future, get to-gether, one and all, and join hands in the great work ahead.

WHAT WE WANT is to develop, through the expression and interchange of thought, basic views calculated to stimulate Commercial Development and Historic Interest, both divisions to be influenced by your ceaseless energy, civic pride and ambition.

So, when called upon for an expression—Let Us Have YOUR Answer to the vital all important question

What Does Weymouth Need Today?

BOY SCOUTS ARE ACTIVE

The idea of a rat campaign was originated by Scoutmaster Arthur Eddy and suggested at the November meeting of the Scoutmasters Association of the Old Colony council, Boy Scouts of America. A committee of three was appointed to look into the situation and to make recommendations for a campaign. Arthur Eddy, scoutmaster of Troop 2, East Weymouth; Howard M. Clark, assistant scoutmaster of Troop 1, Weymouth, and Duncan McKellar, scout executive for the Old Colony council, were named. The committee found conditions as bad as had been pictured, and laid plans for the campaign.

The campaign was launched and H. C. Mosman, special investigator for the State Department of Health, volunteered to assist by instructing different groups of boys as to modern rat catching methods, of which he is a past master. Traps were secured of the latest pattern from the Department and a squad of boys was detailed to set them under the direction of Mr. Mosman. The first setting was in three barns and one shoe factory on Saturday, Feb. 24. A total of approximately seventy traps were set and twenty odd rats caught in the succeeding 24 hours. In the Stetson shoe factory in South Weymouth fifteen large specimens were secured from less than thirty traps. large specimens were of the Norway variety which were caught in Dwyer's barn and Sheppard's barn, just over the line in East Braintree. For the succeeding two weeks Mr. Mosman with different groups of boys and scout leaders from different parts of the town had set traps in likely places and secured large catches of rats. All of the rats which have been caught are of the Norway variety.

There are 200 or more active Boy Scouts in Weymouth with seven active troops. The several leaders are as follows: Troop 1, Rev. C. W. Allen scoutmaster, (Gray Stevens and Howard M. Clark assistants); Troop 2, East Weymouth, Arthur A. Eddy, scoutmaster; Troop 3, East Weymouth Sumner Peers, scoutmaster; Troop 4, Weymouth Heights, Elmer Lunt, scoutmaster (Gordon Rauch, assistant); Troop 5, Arthur Sargent, scoutmaster (Louis Barcello, assistant) Troop 7, East Weymouth, Roland Smith, scoutmaster. All of the troops with the exception of Troops 6 and 7 have had very efficient instruction under Mr. Mosman in the art or trick of catching rats. The boys who have received this instruction will now pass on the knowledge to the rest of their troop.

Suitable prizes are to be awarded to the boys, but no bonus is to be paid for rats as this is the "Community Good Turn" which the Boy Scouts organization plans at least once a year. It is a part of their program and their "good turns" are their own reward.

BROCKTON FAIR

The racing committee of the Brockton Agricultural Society has offered a $40,000 racing program for the Brockton Fair, Oct. 2, 3, 4, 5, and 6. The fair will this year observe its 50th anniversary and it will be a golden jubilee in every department. There are ten early closing stakes announced, as follows:

Three-year-old trot "The Shoe City"; 2.14 trot "The Brockton Transylvania"; 2.16 trot "The Plymouth Rock"; 2.19 trot, 2.24 trot, 2.11 trot, two-year-old trot, free for all pace, "The Chamber of Commerce"; 2.17 pace "The Puritan"; 2.12 pace.

There are ten late closing classes for $1000 each, soon to be announced. So far as the early closing stakes are concerned, horses will be named and eligible on May 15. All races will be three in five, ending with the fifth heat, with the exception of the colt races, which will be two in three. The national rules will govern except that two or more horses from the stable or interest may be named and started on separate payments.

The plan which has worked out with considerable success in past years of giving $10 in gold to drivers winning the first five positions in each race, is to be continued.

SPRING CLEANING

Spring has come, and with its advent the time has arrived for a thorough cleanup. Take the cellar first of all. Remove all decayed vegetables. Rotten apples, old turnips, carrots, etc. It is of the utmost importance. Cases of diphtheria have appeared in North Weymouth, and we have had scarlet fever through the winter. Germs of various diseases are bred in filthy cellars. Old fashioned outbuildings should be scrupulously cleaned and lime sprinkled in the vault. Let the air draw through the cellars and whitewash the walls. "A word to the wise is sufficient".

The Selectmen have designated Thursday, April 26, as "Clean-Up day" in Weymouth, when the town will collect rubbish free. Next week the Gazette-Transcript will issue a "Clean-Up and Paint-Up" edition and has secured some up-to-date illustrations which dealers may use free. Advertisements should be in Monday

Courage Always Admired.

Courage is a quality so necessary for maintaining virtue that it is always respected, even when it is associated with vice.—Dr. Johnson.

PUT OTHERS IN JAIL

A few days for the fish men in jail is worth more than a $1000 fine. It will give the men a chance to meditate. Too bad the coal trust men and the railroad managers could not be jailed for a few months. A Boston paper says: "When winter flees from New England, coal flows in. Householders who have been burning coke, wood and tin cans all winter will be pleased to learn that there will be no fuel shortage this summer".

Grand Patriarch Andrew S. Johnston of Wollaston, a former deputy of Wompatuck encampment, was given a reception by the encampment on Tuesday evening at Odd Fellows hall. There were addresses by Grand officers and others. An orchestra furnished music and refreshments were served.

Several of the sisters attended the convention held at Elks Home, Boston, on Monday and Tuesday. Sister Newcomb and Sister Maynard acted as delegates from Auxiliary 31.

Bad News Never Welcome.

Though it be honest, it is never good to bring bad news. Give to a gracious message a host of tongues; but let ill tidings tell themselves when they be felt.—Shakespeare.

Learning Through Mistakes.

A man who does not know how to learn from his mistakes turns the best schoolmaster out of his life.—Henry Ward Beecher.

Loss by Rust and Corrosion.

Equal to one-third of the annual world output of iron and steel, rust and corrosion cause a loss of $2,500,000,000 a year.

Satisfaction Means Stagnation.

Be always displeased at what thou art, if thou desirest to attain to what thou art not; for where thou hast pleased thyself, there thou abidest.—St. Augustine.

Delphi Entertains

Wednesday night proved an interesting one for members of Delphi lodge, K. of P., when the old amplified third rank was put on in grand style at the Gem theatre building hall before several invited guests. That the event of this special degree is a drawing card is evidenced by the large audience present and the interest manifested by those attending.

HARRY R. LAWRENCE

The guests included Grand Chancellor Lawrence, who made a short address to the members; also present were Grand Keeper of Seals and Records Howe and Supreme Representative Dr. Perkins.

The Concorde Male Quartet gave some pleasing selections during the evening, and after the work a buffet lunch was served

There was no business or social meeting of the Post this week as the different committees have been giving all their attention to the annual show "Three Live Ghosts" which will be given in the Gem theatre this evening.

The committee reports that everything is in readiness for the entertainment, but it is up to every member to be present early and assist the committee in every way possible.

Next Wednesday, April 18, is the evening that the Post Band will give a concert at the Sheppard store in Boston; so get on your ear laps all you radio fans, and hear this wonderful concert assisted by Miss Helen Corridon. It will be under the direction of George W. Ventre. The program:

WEYMOUTH CATHOLIC CLUB

The regular meeting of the Weymouth Catholic Club was held at Bates Opera House Monday evening, Mrs. Charles Y. Berry presiding. After business transactions the special feature of the evening was a fashion show, demonstrated by Miss Helen Lynch coming from one of the largest women's shops in Boston. Following an interesting talk on dress and clothes Miss Lynch proceeded to exhibit a wonderful array of finery, from house dresses to ball gowns. The models, members of the club, were very suitably chosen and did justice to the exhibition. Mrs. Frank Lonergan and Miss Annie Lonergan as matrons; a young woman, Miss Margaret Reidy; a small woman, Miss Catherine Galvin; a slender miss, Miss Esther Dwyer; girls of twelve, Bernadine McCusker and Helen Splaine; a child, Dorothy Reilly. Music was furnished by the club's orchestra playing popular music throughout the evening. After a novel entertainment and being informed that a few surprises were in store for the members for the next meeting, April 22, which will be "Presidents Day", the meeting adjourned.

LATEST RECORDS

Right this way ladies and gentlemen, gather in close. At Nash's Music Store, Jackson Square, you will hear Paul Specht and his orchestra of melody kings on records "A3778 Lady of the evening" and "A3830 Dearest". In days of old, when we were in the army and the captain gave the command attention everybody came to a standstill—and we stood. It is well for the captain's reputation that Paul and his orchestra were not in the neighborhood at the time. If they had been, the captain's command would have been a failure. Absolutely nothing stands still when Paul begins to play. The show is about to start. Step right up and get your records. Dull crowd.—Advertisement

Many Flags Presented By Department W. R. C.

The 44th annual convention of the Women's Relief Corps of Massachusetts held in the Shawmut church, Boston, April 10 and 11, was attended by a thousand members of the order, 684 being voting delegates, the largest number recorded for many years. Mrs. Carrie F. Loring of Reynolds Post, Department president, presided throughout both sessions.

The address of the Department president contained many recommendations for the advancement and progress of the organization, and was unanimously adopted by the convention.

Reports from Department officers and chairmen of various committees, election of officers for the ensuing year, exchange of greetings by allied patriotic orders, addresses by National officers of the Grand Army of the Republic, and Women's Relief Corps, memorial service for deceased members, legislation on subjects pertaining to the work of the order, presentation of flowers and other gifts to retiring and incoming officers, were a part of the proceedings of the convention.

One of the pleasing features of the convention was the presentation of a check for $1189.36 by the Department of Massachusetts Women's Relief Corps, to the Grand Army of the Republic, for its special relief fund.

Among the floral tributes presented to Mrs. Loring, Department president, was a large basket of roses from the city of Boston by Mayor Curley, one from Reynolds Relief Corps, 102, of Weymouth, and another from the convention flower committee which with the many bouquets and ferns formed a beautiful decoration for the entire front of the platform. The entire church was decorated with the national colors and Old Glory, with the motto of the order,—"Fraternity, Charity, and Loyalty"—suspended over the platform, the combination presenting a very attractive appearance.

Following the convention the annual campfire on Wednesday having taxed the capacity of the church. In the attendance we were honored upon this occasion with the presence yof his excellency, Gov. Channing H. Cox; Hon. John Donovan, representative of the Mayor of Boston; Judge Willet, commander-in-chief of the Grand Army of the Republic of Iowa; Mrs. Marie L. Basham, National president, and other officials of patriotic orders.

The presentation of large silk flags to various schools, posts, and hospitals is an annual observance by this Department, and this year was no exception, as eleven of these beautiful flags were presented to the following: Braintree High school, Norwell High school, Mansfield High school, Southbridge High school, Russell school of Cambridge, Quincy school of Boston, Holden Grammar school, Abraham Lincoln school of New Bedford, Massachusetts school for Crippled Children at Canton, Weymouth Hospital, in memory of Mrs. Mary E. Holbrook, past Department presiden and counsellor of Women's

Weymouth Hospital Needs Support of Citizens

The Weymouth Hospital has been open nearly a year. In that period it has proven its worth to the community in every way.

Public hospitals are not money-making institutions and our hospital is no exception to this rule.

The money already contributed has been most wisely expended, and Weymouth has today a hospital that ranks very highly in the medical profession.

The time has come when arrangements must be made for its continuance and with the idea of enlisting all of Weymouth's citizens in its service the people of Weymouth were invited to High school hall last evening.

A pleasing concert program was rendered, but the needs of Weymouth Hospital were paramount, and were presented by Robert S. Hoffman, the chairman of the committee, Dr. Emerson of the Medical staff and others.

It seems with careful oversight of the finances of the institution that the receipts each month are about $300 below the operating cost, so that outside assistance is necesary, either by annual subscriptions or by an annual drive. All Weymouth should be interested.

More about this meeting and the Weymouth Hospital next week.

The Weymouth Hospital is for all the people of Weymouth, shows no partiality, and knows no creed, therefore, it should have the help of all in its work of mercy.

Legion Show Made A Great Hit

With Commercial street lined with pletely filled up last Friday, it showed something was doing. The event being the second annual show of Weymouth Post, No. 79, American Legion. Every buddie that could raise the price of a ticket was there and a great many were able to bring their best girls, and wives (perhaps) provided of course all the little folks at home were taken care of.

One buddie, a regular meeting guy, hurried home over the rough road from New York to be on deck. He said he was tired after the night ride but the show kept his eyes open.

Gem theatre was taxed to its capacity, every seat being taken. The theatre is new and attractively decorated inside, so that when it is filled up it presents a pretty sight. To some it seemed like a dream, that at last Weymouth had such a fine place for these entertainments.

Nor did the size of the audience or the pleasing appearance of the surroundings scare the actors, for each one did more than his level best, for many were the comments that it was one of the best amateur shows yet producted in Weymouth. Everyone taking part did well and the cast follows:

THE PLAYERS

(In order of their first appearance)

Mrs. Gubbins, known as "Old Sweetheart" — Miss Annie Deane
Peggy Woofers, — Miss Helen P. Coridan
Bolton, of the American Detective agency — Albert R. Humphrey
Jimmie Gubbins, — Eugene E. Smith
William Foster, alias William Jones — Roland H. Haviland
Spoofy, — Oberlin S. Clark
Rose Gordon, — Miss Grace V. Donovan
Brigs, of Scotland Yard, — Raymond E. Stein
Benson, — Pasquale Santacroce
Lady Leicester, — Miss Hazel Dexheimer

Some credit for the fine production goes to Mrs Deane, the coach, who labored faithfully and unselfishly and the results testify her labors were not in vain.

When you see the boys of 1917—18 romping around th staege, you wonder if Roland was on deck next morning at Nash's Corner, or Raymond at Fort Point, and if Patsy caught his regular morning train after all the excitment of the night before. As for "Jimmy" Smith, some style was it not, and Bolton was there as was Spoofy who, with the others, made fine ghosts.

And the splendid work of both Helen Corridan and Grace Donovan

NOW IN TRAVELGRAMS

An East Weymouth friend has received the following clipping from "Fountain Head News" which concerns Mr. and Mrs. Harry Berry formerly of East Weymouth:

B. J. Palmer, D. C., Ph. C.

Dear Sir: Thought possibly it would interest you, if you have not heard of same before, to learn of some Chiropractic advertising that two of the actors are doing to whom you issued Travelgrams. It was my pleasure this week to give them adjustments. Their names are Miss Theo. Keith and Harry Berry.

The act is a follows: Mr. Berry sits on an ordinary parlor chair, which has been elevated several feet above the stage, where it appears to be hypnotically balanced on top of a bottle and vase. Miss Keith says to him: "Do you ever slip?" And Mr. Berry replies: "Yes, every time I get a fresh bottle. Then I have to go to Dr. So-and-So, the chiropractor" naming the chiropractor adjusting them.

This is wonderful advertising for the chiropractors who have the privilege of adjusting them, as no less than fifteen thousand people heard my name while they were performing here. And yet the cry is, "Travelgrams don't pay", or something of this sort. I honor Travelgrams by charging them half rate. Oh, the pity of some in our ranks!

As ever yours, and wishing you health and success, I am, sincerely yours,

W. E. KEITZER, D. C.

Halloween Superstition.

The old custom of lighting bonfires on Halloween, which was started by the Druid priests, survived in Scotland and Wales until recent years. Small stones were placed in the dying embers, one stone for each person at the bonfire. The ashes were searched the next day and if any of the stones were displaced the person represented was destined to die within a year.

NORTH WEYMOUTH VALUES

Editor Gazette-Transcript:

From the Assessors' figures of 1922, published last week, the business section of North Weymouth has nothing to complain of, in the way of high valuations, and should not expect many improvements from the town on such low assessments.

Only one lot on Sea and Bridge streets is valued at over $5000, and that is the nine-acre lot of Ellen F. Bates, and her valuation is only a little over four cents per square foot. A dandy estate on the car line, and near the water, but not yet developed

Only one other lot is valued over $4000 and that is the beautiful estate of Elias S Beals at Thomas Corner. Of course the front land is valued at over two cents and many believe the back land should be assessed over two cents.

Only two other lots are assessed at $3000 or over, the land at Bicknell Square between Sea street and Newton street, destined to become the business center of North Weymouth, but the valuation is only eight and nine cents per square foot.

In the class above $1000 and below $2000, are 16 lots, while below $1000 are 29 lots out of a total of 50.

North Weymouth is the most rapidly growing ward of Weymouth, as far as population goes, and is a popular summer resort, and some of the land on Sea street and Bridge street should be assessed over 25 cents per square foot. PROGRESS

THE MAN AND CAT

Editor Gazette-Transcript:

(An interesting story of one of our leading citizens and merchants.)

If you happen in the vicinity of 31 Commercial street, Weymouth Landing, some morning about 7 A. M. you may be the witness of a very amusing little episode which occurs every day.

An elderly gentleman may be seen to emerge from his dooryard followed by a beautiful black cat. The gentleman whom we will call Mr. X crosses the street and the cat keeps close to his heels.

Mr. X has to stop at the postoffice every morning, during which time our friend the cat sits demurely under the large letterbox directly outside the postoffice. When Mr. X emerges "Mr." cat proceeds on his journey, his tail straight in the air and with a disdainful look for any "mere" cat that may pass his way.

Upon this unique couple's arrival at a point where Mr. X crosses the busy Washington Square, the cat waits patiently to be lifted into Mr. X's arms and carried safely across the street to "their" place of business. "Mr." cat remains "at work" all day and at the close of the day's business escorts Mr. X back home, there to await the coming of another day.

WRESTLING BOUT

The wrestling fans were given unexpected thrills at Fogg Opera House Tuesday night. Basil Warren, the pride of Weymouth in the wrestling line, threw Felix Sney of Rockland after a little more than two hours. There must have been well over 500 spectators.

Weymouth may be divided (sectionally speaking), but are united athletically when "foreigners" from Rockland or any other town invade our town in quest of honors. Like Felix Sney they ride to a fall. From the beginning of their match at 9 o'clock it was only a question of how long the master mechanic of wrestling of East Weymouth would take to complete the job.

Warren would have shaped up better if his opponent had but assumed the offensive once in a while. For the first half hour Sney held on to the mat as though his life depended on it. Warren contented himself with keeping his weight on his man under those circumstances. The mat seemed too small to enable the East Weymouth man to pin his opponent's shoulders to it early. Every time it seemed as though that would occur Sney would squirm off the mat.

The men wrestled catch as catch can (strangle and toe holds barred) each man to come to the center on their feet, if the referee ruled them off the mat. Benny Ostheus officiated.

There was personal ill feeling between the men. It dates back to the days when they were opponents in basketball.

A few women saw the match.

It looked to an innocent spectator as though Warren's dinky little mustache played no small part. On one occasion he had Sney down. In endeavoring to get the latter's two shoulders so that they would stick to the mat Basil kept massaging or tickling the muscle of one of Sney's arms with the aforesaid mustache. We thought any minute Sney would laugh, but he didn't. But it was a ticklish situation to be in.

Sney seemed to be pleased to think he was staying so long with the Weymouth champion. When Ostheus announced that the bout had been in session for two hours Sney kept looking out in the audience more than ever for encouragement from his friends. He looked once too often, however. Like a flash the East Weymouth bearcat reached over and grabbed Sney around the body and threw him with a crash.

It took all the starch out of the erstwhile "iron man" from Rockland. The honor of Weymouth was upheld when the bout was awarded to Warren.

Joshua (Doc) Fabyan, who developed Warren, witnessed the bout from the stage.

Two preliminaries were held. Each was wrestled 15 minutes without decisive results. In one of these Martin Zeoli of East Weymouth met with Jack White of Cambridge.

WHY

Superior to any Shoe on earth

The sole of the foot differs in every individual—no two being alike. With the ordinary shoe the friction of the foot on the hard insole is the cause of many foot ailments: corns, bunions, enlarged joints, etc. In summer the heat penetrates the sole and in winter dampness and cold result in rheumatism, neuralgia, etc. The prevents and cures all these afflictions.

DR. A. REED

This cushion is entirely unlike any "inner sole" and is built into and becomes a part of the shoe. The felt cushion is pliable and a non-conductor of either heat or cold. The feet are kept at a natural temperature. The cushion conforms to and fills every curve of the foot, distributes the weight evenly and admits of perfect blood circulation.

The bride wore a costume of grey taffeta and the bridesmaid's dress was of grey canton crepe. Following the ceremony there was an informal reception and a wedding dinner was served. The couple were the recipients of many handsome gifts. Mr. and Mrs. McGonnigal left on an evening train on their wedding trip and on their return will reside for the present with the bride's parents.

EXPRESSION OF APPRECIATION

For the many favors and kindly interest, hearty cooperation so generously given in connection with our annual dramatics we wish to sincerely thank our audience, Home Economics Committee, the cast, and all who aided in any way the success of the the performance.

MONDAY CLUB OF WEYMOUTH

WITHERELL—STEWART

Miss E. Ruth Stewart, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Frank W. Stewart and Robert E. Witherell of Costa Rica, Central America, were married last evening at the home of the bride's parents, 31 Commercial street, by Rev. J. Caleb Justice, pastor of the Union Congregational church of Weymouth and Braintree in the presence of relatives and friends of the couple from New York, Boston, Dorchester, Braintree, Middleton, and the Weymouths. The parlor where the ceremony took place was very prettily decorated with laurel and jonquils. The bride was charmingly attired in a costume of white canton crepe. She was attended by Miss Helen Widenhorn of Dorchester. She wore pink French voile. The groom's brother, Norman Witherell of South Braintree, was best man.

A reception followed the ceremony. An orchstra furnished music. The couple were the recipients of many handsome and costly gifts.

The groom is a native of South Braintree, but has lived in Costa Rica for several years where he is representative of the United Fruit Co. The bride is a very popular young lady, a member of the Union Congregational church and a popular member of the flower circle and other societies connected with the church.

Mr. and Mrs. Witherell left after the reception on their honeymoon and in ten days will sail for Costa Rica where they will reside.

LEGION SHOW

all helped to put the thing over so successfully.

Miss Deane drew, as she should, much deserved applause from the audience.

The second annual will pass down in the history of Weymouth Post as one fine time.

Wern't those three fellows, Smith Clark and Haviland rather lively ghosts? We thought so. And who ever heard of ghosts making love?

And Patsy,—that boy sure did make some of the police officers sit up and take notice, with his snappy "Yes sir", and the way he handled the "ghosts".

But, laying all joking aside for a minute, a whole lot of credit is due to Gene Smith. He certainly played the part of Jimmie (which by the way is no cinch) in wonderful style and carried the show over in a manner that was great. Much of the success of the show is due to him.

Miss Annie Deane in the part of "Old Sweetheart", drew many a laugh and much applause. Her "'Ot Gin" was good, as was the part where the "baby" arrived on the scene. Miss Deane and Smith made a wonderful pair and did more than their share in keeping the listeners in good humor.

It sems to us that Stein acquired that mustache rather quickly. First he is seen without it and then, lo, and behold, there appeared on his upper lip a little foliage. We will say, however, that it certainly assisted him to carry out his part in a way that was pleasing. He'd make a good detective, wouldn't he?

Peggy Woofers, Miss Helen Corridan in real life, with her "Maw Syes" etc., not only made the audience laugh, but came very near getting the "actors" going when she was answering Stein's questions, and as Jimmie's sweetheart, well, Jimmie was a lucky chap.

Speaking of being lucky,—Bill Foster, alias Jones, wasn't very much out of luck, at times it looked as though Bil was eclipsing Jimmie's luck.

Grace Donovan, as Rose Gordon, played the part of Bill's faithful sweetheart and purveyor of hand-painted china in an awfully clever way. That scene where Rose and Briggs held the center of the stage was very well done.

Al Humphrey looked the part of an American detective, and like all men of this profession, did more than just pinch the man he was after. It was really his "Remember one thousand pounds" was the thing that started the action.

And who says Spoofy wasn't well done? There's no question in anyone's mind that the big hit of the show was his entrance with the baby carriage. All thru the show Clark played right up to his part, from pinching the jewels from Briggs to hugging his wife when the curtain went down.

Lady Leicester, taken by Hazel Dexheimer, added a fitting climax to the performance when she entered and claimed her jewels, and last but not least, her long lost husband.

No account of the show would be complete without mentioning the cop, Everett Frost. Although he hasn't had any experience on the police force, the way he played the part last Friday night qualifies him for a place on the force.

Now, in closing, we want to leave this thought,—when the next Legion show is advertised, don't hesitate about buying your tickets early because the local Post has demonstraetd that it is there with the goods and can give anyone, yes even the grouchiest grouch, a good time and an enjoyable evening.

Au revoir until next year!

Explaining Ship's "Log."

In olden times the speed of a ship was measured by pulling a piece of wood through the water. The name "log" has stuck to the mechanical devices now used to measure the speed of a ship.

"Want to spring him?" asked the detective with a grin.

Bartley nodded, and Black went away to arrange the matter. I could see what Bartley was after. Only the police and ourselves knew that the man was to be placed on the stand, and Bartley wanted to see what effect his sudden introduction might have on those present. There might be someone so surprised by it that he would give himself away.

In a row of chairs, directly in front of the coroner's desk and about six feet away, were seated the members of Slyke's household. Slyke's stepdaughter Ruth, dressed in dark blue, was between Miss Potter and an old man, who, I decided, was the minister uncle who had brought her home the night of the murder. I could not see Miss Potter's face, but her hands showed a great nervous strain; they were never still, picking incessantly at the folds of her dress. On her right were two empty chairs for the chauffeur and Roche, and beyond them the butler and the other servants.

We had to wait some time for the doctor, who had been delayed by a case. When he arrived, he pushed his way hurriedly through the people at the far end of the room, pausing only for a moment to speak to the district attorney. He took his place back of the desk, and, after removing some papers from his bag, stood for a moment looking over the crowd. He seemed almost too worn and nervous to preside.

A silence fell on the room, the curious, expectant silence that I have so often noticed at inquests. To most of the people present, the doctor had ceased to be their familiar friend and had become an impersonal officer of the law, the instrument for unraveling a mysterious death. Perhaps some were thinking of the man in whose house they were and whose dead body lay above awaiting burial. The silence was suddenly broken by a heavy peal of thunder.

To my surprise, the doctor called as his first witness Slyke's sister-in-law. As a rule, the first person called at an inquest is the one who discovered the body, but for some reason the doctor had decided to keep the butler for a later moment.

The first questions, after Miss Potter had taken the oath, were the usual ones. They related to her name and her relationship to Slyke. She said her name was Alice Potter, and that she was the sister of his dead wife. Slyke had asked her to come and run his house for him, and for the last ten years she had done so. In response to a question as to whether she had been paid for her services, she flushed deeply and explained that while no real salary had been paid, whenever she had needed money she had asked Slyke for it and he had given it to her. The sum varied, though she doubted if she had ever received more than a thousand in any one year. He always had been willing to give her as much as she asked for, and had not questioned the amounts. There had never been any trouble over money matters between them.

This was all evidence that I knew; and, while she was giving it, I glanced about the room, then watched the doctor. He was finding his position a very difficult one, as he was the family physician as well as the coroner. He put his questions with as much delicacy as possible. The whole affair seemed to be very distasteful to him. It was particularly trying for a man who was still feeling the effects of a nervous breakdown. Miss Potter, fortunately, became more at ease as the questioning proceeded. She kept her eyes down and gave her answers in such a low voice that at times it was hard to hear them at all.

All through the early part of Miss Potter's evidence there were rumbles of distant thunder. Leaning back in my chair, I pushed aside the heavy draperies that hid the window, and looked out. It was almost like night. A big storm was close at hand. The thunder was still some miles away, and I could see distant, almost continuous flashes of lightning. After a quick glance I let the curtain fall back into place.

When I turned my attention again to the evidence, Doctor King was questioning Miss Potter about the finding of the body. She testified that she was at breakfast when the butler rushed into the room, crying that something was wrong with Mr. Slyke. She knew her brother-in-law had intended to go fishing that morning, and was surprised to learn that he was not yet up. The butler had told her that he had called him, and receiving no reply had entered his room and found Mr. Slyke still in bed. When he did not answer when spoken to again, he (the butler) had come at once to her.

She stated that she had gone up at once to his room, the door of which had been left open by the butler when he rushed out. She had crossed to the bed and called him by name. When he did not answer, she looked closer and saw that he was dead. Her voice broke a little on this last statement, but she soon recovered and continued. The next thing she had done, she said, was to call the doctor.

For the first time, the district attorney took a hand in the proceedings.

"Tell us how you found him."

She answered that he was lying on his back, the bedclothes pulled up around his chin, and his hands by his side. She had not pulled the bedclothes down from the body, nor disturbed them in any way. It was not until she had noticed the wound in his head that she realized he had been shot.

"Did you disturb the body?" was the next question.

There was a long silence, then haltingly, "I—well, that is—I did close his eyes. Their expression frightened me, so—I—closed them."

She received a rather disgusted look from the district attorney, who asked, "Did you not know that the body should have been left as you found it."

"I—" she made an appealing gesture: "I never thought of that. Only of his eyes! They frightened me, they—stared so. I simply closed them. But I did nothing else."

King then asked a question that surprised me. "You thought he had committed suicide?"

She hesitated, started to speak, stopped and at last found her voice. "Why, yes. That—that is—I did at the time. But I don't know what to think now."

"Why did you think he killed himself?"

This seemed a harder question to answer than the other.

"Why, I don't know. You see, he was shot; and I knew of no one who would want to kill him. As far as that goes, I know of no reason why he should have wanted to take his own life."

"Why Did You Think He Killed Himself?"

The next questions were along the line she had suggested by her answers. Could she not think of some reason why he might have committed suicide—ill health or money troubles? Had he quarreled with anyone lately? She seemed to have more difficulty with these last questions than with any of the previous ones. She was so long in answering that some of them had to be repeated several times. She was so careful of what she said that she gave me the impression that she was trying to keep something back.

In response to the first question, she repeated that she knew no reason why Slyke should want to commit suicide. She had heard of no money troubles, and his health was good. No, she had never heard of his having quarreled with anyone. It was this last answer that she had hesitated longer over than over any of the others, and it was the one which caused me to feel sure she was hiding something.

The question regarding the revolver that had been found in Slyke's hand she answered readily enough. He had kept it in his room, just where, she did not know; it was one that he had bought a year before.

When questioned as to her own doings on the night of his death, she could tell us nothing of value. There had been a card party, but she had gone to bed about ten o'clock and had not even heard the men go out. During the night she had heard no sound. As this was all she had to tell she left the stand. Though her testimony had thrown no light on what had taken place, I felt more strongly than ever that she could have done so had she wished. I glanced at Bartley, and the queer smile he gave me hinted that he, too, thought as I did.

The next witness was a Doctor Webster. I knew that a second physician had been called in on the morning of the crime, but had not met him. Doctor King's position was a peculiar one, as he was not only the physician who had first seen the body, but also the coroner. In order to have the testimony of a second medical man, he had sent Doctor Webster to examine the body and testify as to its condition. As the doctor took the seat near the coroner, I examined him closely. He was a man of at least sixty, rather stout, with a beaming, kindly face, and white beard that gave him the appearance of a practitioner of the old school.

In response to questions, he told how Doctor King had requested him to go to the house and examine the body, because, as coroner, King himself could not testify at the inquest. In terms more scientific than plain, he described how Slyke met his death, a death which, he said, must have been instantaneous, as the bullet had lodged in the brain.

"Doctor, do you think the wound could have been self-inflicted?" came the question.

The doctor paused, then answered thoughtfully, "That is very hard to answer. So far as the wound itself is concerned, it could have been self-inflicted. But other things that were brought to my attention cause me to believe that it could not have been so inflicted."

The room stiffened into attention. It was the first hint they had had that Slyke might have been murdered.

"Explain your answer. What do you mean by 'other things were brought to your attention'?"

The doctor replied slowly, "The facts I will mention were brought to my attention by Mr. John Bartley, the famous criminal investigator, whom I found at the house when I arrived."

At the mention of Bartley's name a little murmur of surprise went over the room. Half way down the room the reporters, for the first time, were writing hurriedly, and in a minute a telegraph boy went out with a mass of telegrams. Within an hour the fact that Bartley was working on the case would be in all the newspaper offices in New York.

The doctor continued: "Mr. Bartley aided me in making my examination of the body. The wound was, as I have said, one that a man could have easily inflicted upon himself, but such a wound causes death within a few seconds after it is made. I thought at first sight that it was suicide, but Mr. Bartley pointed out that the hands of the dead man, one of which held the revolver, were under the bedclothes and that they were pulled up smoothly around his neck. It would have been impossible for Mr. Slyke himself to have done that. I mean he could not have killed himself and then placed his arms under the clothes, after first pulling them up around his chin. He would not have had time before he died, had he fired the shot. As Mr. Bartley pointed out—and as I should have thought of for myself—in cases of violent death the eyes are open. Mr. Slyke's eyes were almost closed. How they were closed after death, Miss Potter has just told us."

Again there came a murmur of astonishment. The doctor's statement had been entirely unexpected by most of the audience. For the first time it was suggested that, instead of Slyke's having killed himself, he had been murdered. All awaited eagerly further developments.

"Then you would say that Mr. Slyke was murdered?" came the question.

The doctor's answer was a long time in coming.

"I hardly know what to say. What Mr. Bartley pointed out to me causes me to believe that Mr. Slyke was killed. Of course, there is a possibility that the wound might have been self-inflicted, and someone else arranged the bedclothes around his neck after he was dead."

He paused again, then continued, "That might have been done, but the chances are that he did not kill himself. I cannot positively state, however, whether it was suicide or murder."

His hesitation started a long argument between him, the coroner, and the district attorney. If Slyke had killed himself, then someone else must have pulled up the bedclothes and arranged the body. What had been the person's reason for doing it? If, on the other hand, he had been murdered, then a very definite attempt had been made to make it look like suicide. The revolver in the dead man's hand came under discussion, and Doctor Webster said that, though it could be placed in a person's hand after death, any trained eye could detect the fact. His evidence, while it had for the first time suggested that a murder might have been committed, had yet done little to clear up the mystery. I could see by the doubt and bewilderment in their faces that his uncertainty as to whether it was murder or suicide had communicated itself to the audience. They looked eagerly about for the next witness, wondering what his testimony would disclose. There was little enough, as I knew too well, that any witness could tell that would throw light on Slyke's death.

The coroner glanced at a piece of paper and said: "Will Mr. John Bartley kindly take the stand?"

Whiting Addresses Congregational Club

The Men's Club of the East Weymouth Congregational church completed on Wednesday night a very successful season with a rattling good roast beef supper, served by Charles Humphrey; then, with the ladies as invited guests, heard a splendid address by Edward E. Whiting, the man responsible for the Whiting column in the Boston Herald

The Men's Club has had four good suppers, followed by interesting speakers, and the members were so pleased with the results that on the motion of C. Will Bailey, seconded by Minot P. Garey, it was voted to elect William C. Earle and this year's committee consisting of William C. Earle, Ralph Haskins, Herbert Rockwood, Ralph Bates, Charles Humphrey.

The speaker of the evening was introduced by Rev. K. A. Handanian, who spoke of him as a keen and careful observer, with broad, in fact world-wide knowldege, who was fair in his writings that are read by so many.

Mr. Whiting said on being introduced that he had no objection to the ladies, but rather enjoyed the privilege of talking a full hour without being interrupted. In fact Mrs. W. had objected to coming just to hear him talk so long. His subject, he announced, would be "Politics", not his own, but of Congress sometimes and on the subject of foreign affairs.

He deplored the vicious propaganda that was being circulated in the country, which was a fertile ground for radicalism, but felt the American people would watch their step carefully and put a check on a growing disregard for government and public service.

To many good men, politics was repulsive, which should not be the case, for there was no nobler or greater service a person could render his fellow citizens than to be an office seeker (with high motives). And an office seeker with good motives deserves the respect of all.

Lincoln was a politician, as such, an office seeker, and the history of this country would have been far different if he had followed the practice of law. Politics is not a low occupation, but one that calls for broadness.

We poke fun at Congress; sometimes it is deserved (he did in his column), but at the same time he had great respect for Congress.

Occasionally there is corruption in public life; one is obliged to discriminate. Many judge it at its worst rather than at its best. Corruption is found just as often in business and law.

Many reformers are two-faced. But for the good man in public life; all should have high regard. Get acquainted with him, and you will find him four-square, and many are in office for a noble purpose; with good motives, very small reward, often a long busy tiresome day of committee hearings and sessions. Your Congresman on the job is a hard worker.

The government of this country is a big business, biggest in the world, judge it at its best. Consider all the good and make allowances for the very few mistakes it makes. Many of these mistakes occur because the people themselves do not know what they want. Have confidence in your Government.

Perhaps a great deal cannot be gress; it had its difficulties, like gress; ti had its difficulties, like blocs; but in reality Congress reflected public sentiment; since the war all the world has been in confusion. The people in this country or public sentiment, is in the course of readjustment. It seems dazed and confused and on many political questions like the cash bonus, Merchant Marine, and foreign affairs, nobody knows what the public wants or where they stand.

Such was the case of the past Congress, it was but the sentiment or voice of the people. It was not able to settle down to business. Opinions run in circles and Congress truly represented this indecisiveness.

A perfect Congress is not possible or expected in a true democracy. If all the Congressmen were trained experts we would have no democracy; they would be above the general run of people in opinions and ideas, and would not truly represent the American people. The House of Representatives is not a specialized body, but is correctly named in that it truly represents all shades, classes, degrees and mentality. As such representatives they decide all questions honestly and fairly; it is true self government.

What the 68th Congress will be is hard to tell; it has many radicals and will be difficult Congress to get results from.

The speaker mentioned the new senators like Brookhart, Fraser, and others, and said that many opinions vary. The West is different from the East; they are entitled to have ideas, and to try them out, and just because they may be a little different from the worn out East, our discrimination must be fair. It is meant that new ideas should be tried out in Congress. It was the proper place for them. We have had fanatics for 150 years, yet Congress was still alive.

He then touched on his second point, that of foreign affairs in the next few months would be the epocal period. If not decided before it will be an issue at the next Presidential campaign.

The government is trying to establish a formal policy. It is trying to feel out what the American people want. The last war has made it necessary that the country now have a policy that was not so necessary before the war. The question revolves into four means of settlement. It is very important that all the people read and study all phases of this big issue. It is very important, so read and form your own opinions and do not be too suspicious of foreign affairs.

The speaker at the close urged all good citizens to be politicians, for outside of the church there is no higher or nobler occupation than in the service of the country. You can do this in three ways:

1. Be a candidate with and for a high purpose
2. Congress cannot be perfect or specialists, but be a true representative of your district
3. Read all you can about our foreign affairs; familiarize yourself on all phases of the questions.

Ladies Night Union Men's Club

One of the most enjoyable occasions of the Men's club of Union church was the Ladies Night of Wednesday evening, with its chicken supper, entertainment and dance.

The entertainment consisted of the following numbers: "Ensemble", "Carolina in the Morning", "Gallager and Shean", "I found a four-leaf clover", "Goldburg Sanata in A", "Tomorrow", and "Chicago", rendered by the Jazz Jonahs with many variations. These speed artists were black and white clowns and when unmasked proved to be: P. R. Cook, mandolin; C. A. Vinal, banjo; Stanley Heald, violin; Arthur Bernard, banjo; Porter Thompson, drums and traps; with Mrs. Heald accompanist on the piano.

Mr. Cook rendered a mandolin solo accompanied by the whole orchestra and Mr. Bernard, a vocal solo "Twilight" accompanied by the orchestra.

Mr. and Mrs. Arthur A. Moulton of Melrose, violin and piano, gave splendid interpretations of "Chanson Romantique" by Borowski, "Salut d' Armour" by Elgar, and the "Hungarian Dance" by Brahams, with encore "Liebs Lied" by Kruler.

Miss Sally Rayan Davis, reader, gave selections both humorous and of more serious nature, among which were the one-act play by Barie "Sir Knight" and the "One-legged Goose". William Ingles starred on his concertina in a medley of Scottish melodies.

About 160 sat down to a chicken dinner which consisted of the following menu, grape fruit with cherry, chicken, green peas, mashed potatoes assorted ices with cakes, nuts and coffee. The supper was served by the young ladies dressed in patriotic costumes.

Walsh and Phelan At K. of C. Breakfast

The Knights of Columbus of Weymouth received their Easter communion in a body on Sunday at St. Jerome's church, North Weymouth; about 300 attending.

The members met at the clubhouse and were taken in autos to the church. Mass was celebrated by the pastor, Rev. Cornelius I. Riordon. Music was rendered by the choir.

After mass they returned to K. of C. hall where a breakfast was served. The long fast after riding in the chill April morning proved an ideal appetizer for the good breakfast prepared for them by Frank McCarthy, assisted by members chosen from the Daughters of Isabella. DeNeil's orchestra furnished music.

The breakfast was just completed when one of the speakers, Hon. David I. Walsh, junior senator in Congress from Massachusetts, entered the hall. He was greeted with an outburst of handclapping that continued until the senator reached his seat. Thomas F.

SENATOR DAVID I. WALSH

Phelan, another speaker, entered soon afterwards. The senator was introduced by Grand Knight Thomas T. McCarthy.

Senator Walsh said: "There is a banquet where senator and laborer meet on common ground—the altar railing. God recognizes no difference in the stations of men. It matters not to Him whether a man has accumulated the riches of a Morgan or a Rockefeller, or that he digs in the ditch, provided that he gives Him his heart. And very often it is, that the poorer a man may be in the things of this world—the greater the love. 'Tis not what we get in this world that makes us better—'tis what we GIVE.

Senator Walsh reflected in a touching manner on the way his mother who had raised a family of ten, would always consider it a privilege to be asked to assist whenever there was sickness in a neighboring family—that was her way of giving. After his sisters had become grown up they tried to put his mother "on the shelf", by making her give up work while they assumed management of the home (to let her take things easy) One day his mother paid a visit to a friend, going at 5 P. M.. She stayed to supper, and returned home about 9 that night. His sisters chided her because she stayed so long saying it was "old-fashioned" to make long calls. "But", said she, "they hid my shawl and bonnet".

Senator Walsh condemned cowardice in public officials who were concerned more about job-taking than about the needs of the people who elected them. "A primary school boy could have foreseen that if there was not a shovelful of coal taken out of the mines for five months there would be a coal famine", thundered the senator, "yet when I implored the President on the floor of the National Senate to use his power to compel a settlement of the strike" he was requested by the leaders of the Republican party and the Democratic party "not to start anything as the coal barons are heavy contributors to our campaign funds'".

When the New England winter came the awfulness of the situation was reflected in the fact that New England was only allowed 60 percent of its normal share of coal.

"Both these parties should wake up. The American people are tired of protesting. I do not want to see any radical element get a foothold in our country'".

Senator Walsh was given a great ovation at the conclusion of his address and left at once for Springfield where he had a speaking engagement. He was accompanied as far as Quincy by Frank Foy of the American Legion of that city, where he had

SIX days shalt thou labor and do all thy work. Ex. 20:9

Mr. Merchant!

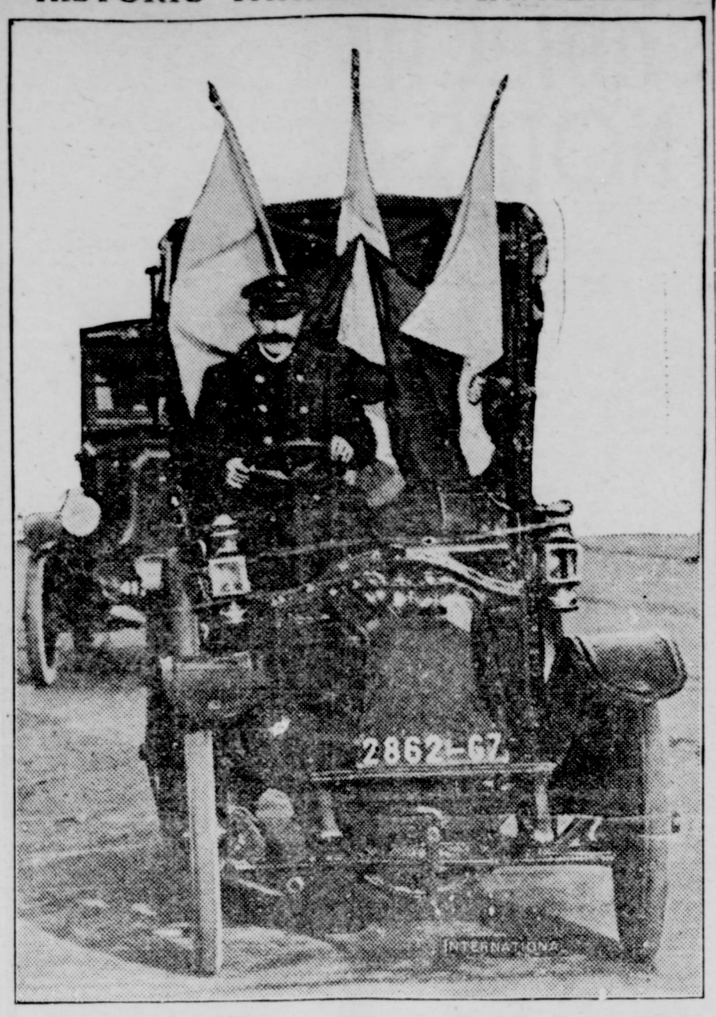

Whether you buy newspapers and sell them to passersby, or own big mills and dispose of their products, you know that honesty pays; that no sale is a good sale unless both sides profit, and that he profits most who serves best.

These axioms have grown out of the experience of hosts of merchants in every town.

The church is the institution in this town—in every town—which teaches honesty and truth and mercy. Without the church business would revert to the selfish, sharp barter of ancient days.

The churches of this town appeal to every merchant to support them with time, ability and money.

HISTORIC TAXICAB IN INVALIDES

This taxicab—one of the fleet that was used to rush troops from Paris to the front line in the very early days of the World war—was placed in the Invalides, near the historic coach in which Marshal Foch and representatives of the allied and enemy commands signed the armistice. The taxi was driven, mid much solemnity, through the streets of Paris, to the Invalides, where in befitting ceremonies it was dedicated. The fleet of taxis carried five regiments to the front.

GAS ENGINE HAS MANY TROUBLES

Like Every Other Piece of Delicate Machinery It Has Its Little Peculiarities.

AMATEUR DRIVER IS PUZZLED

Disarrangement of Ignition System Is Cause of Much Worry for Inexperienced Person—May Be Simply Loose Wire.

The gasoline engine in an automobile, as a general thing, is reliable and as built at the present time gives excellent service, although like every other piece of machinery it has peculiarities and one of these which is sometimes annoying is that of unexpectedly stopping and refusing to start when at the same time there seems to be nothing wrong, at least as far as the amateur driver can discover.

In case an automobile engine does not run properly or stops, there are, in general, three places in which one may look for trouble. The first is in the ignition system, the second, carburetion and the third, mechanical trouble. An experienced driver can very often tell from the performance of the engine on stopping which of these three places causes the trouble.

Faulty Ignition System.

If the engine stops suddenly the fault is likely to be in the ignition system. If, on the other hand, it simply begins to lose power and gradually dies down or pops back through the carburetor several times before stopping, the trouble is likely to be in the carburetion system.

Trouble in the ignition system is complicated for an inexperienced person, although many times it is due simply to a loose wire which may easily be located if you made some previous study of the ignition system and know something as to where the wires should be placed. Ordinarily, there should not be any loose ends, which means that if you find a loose wire hanging underneath the hood, it is disconnected and should be replaced on some binding post and if you have studied the position of the wires, you will be able to replace it and continue on your way.

Usually, the posts loosen and the trouble will occur before the wires have entirely fallen away and by going over the various posts with your fingers, and seeing that they are tight will often locate the trouble.

If trouble is located in the gasoline system, first look in the tank to see that there is plenty of gasoline and if you find this all right, open the gasoline drain valve on the carburetor and allow the gasoline to run for a few seconds to see that it runs through freely. If there is no drain in the carburetor remove the gasoline pipe line from the carburetor and see if the gasoline runs through freely. If it does not run it is possible that the shut-off valve at the tank has worked around and closed itself and, if not, it is possible that dirt has worked down into the bottom of the tank and plugged up the line.

The easiest way to clean this out temporarily is to blow back through the gasoline pipe and force the dirt away from the opening in the tank. This remedy is only temporary as the dirt will sooner or later plug the line.

Sticking of the valves, breaking of valve springs, the valve tappet adjustments working loose and out of adjustment or actual breaking of some part of the engine, are things which fortunately seldom occur and they can usually be repaired only by an experienced workman.

Study Instruction Book.

"Study your instruction book and ask someone to help you on the parts you do not understand," is a phrase which has been used. It will save you a great deal of time, temper and money to know the general operating principles of your car, even though you do not wish to make repairs on it yourself.

Often small parts will work out of adjustment when you are a long way from help and a little knowledge at such times will save you a lot of annoyance. Dig out your instruction book and put in some studying.

FAULTY BRAKES ARE CAUSE OF ACCIDENTS

Don't Wait Until Tomorrow to Give Them "Once Over."

More Automobile Smash-Ups Result From Improper Adjustment or Application Than From Any Other Reason.

Watch your brakes!

Don't wait until tomorrow to give them the "once over!" You may be in the hospital by then—or in the police station. Cats may have nine lives, but no mortal has ever yet been killed more than once. It doesn't sound like a big item in the "Things to Do Today" column, but—

More motor accidents result from faulty adjustment or application of brakes than from any other cause.

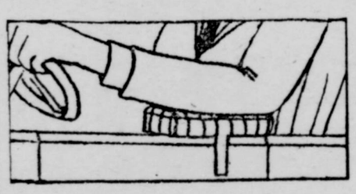

This has been the finding of the National Safety council in a survey of auto smash-ups, traffic deaths and reckless driving cases.

When you car is going 10 miles an hour, will your brakes bring it to a standstill within 9.8 feet; or 20.8 feet at 15 miles, 37 feet at 20 miles, 58 feet at 25 miles, 83.3 feet at 30 miles, 104 feet at 35 miles, 148 feet at 40 miles, and 231 feet at 50 miles? If not, get busy! Brakes should be tested every day. Before going a block from the garage make a service test by throwing out the clutch and applying the brakes. If possible a dry spot should be selected for this test. Under no circumstances should the car be taken farther if the brakes fail to operate correctly. Go back to the garage and have them fixed.

Automobile brakes have a definite relation to safety.

Watch those brakes! Keep out of trouble; keep out of jail!

Arm Rest for Driver.

The driver who is handy with the hammer and saw can fashion a neat pad on which he can rest his left arm when driving. The rest is made so that it can slip over the door alongside the driver's seat and can be taken off when not used.

WEYMOUTH HEIGHTS

—A chicken pie supper will be held in the First Church chapel at 6.30 this evening under auspices of the Ladies Benevolent Society with Mrs. Charles Macker as chairman of committee. After the supper there will be a minstrel show given by the young people of Weymouth Heights. This show will be filled with novel songs, jokes, etc., and a five-piece mandolin orchestra will accompany the songs that are sung. It will give each and every one in the community a chance to see a real minstrel show and it is hoped that a good attendance will be present. The proceeds from this supper and entertainment will go towards church improvements

—The Norfolk County Christian Endeavor convention was held Thursday at Norwood with about 700 in attendance. Our local Senior Christian Endeavor Society attended 100 percent, everyone in the society going except one; that one being out of town; an excellent showing for Weymouth Heights. The convention was filled with interesting addresses by prominent Christian Endeavor people and a delicious banquet was served at 6 followed by an evening session. The banquet was interspersed with cheers and songs by the local unions and Christian Endeavor Societies.

—Time to paint up and clean up. We have the famous Bay State Paint: none better. J. H. Murray Hardware Co., Broad street, East Weymouth.—Advertisement

—Miss Ethel Arthur of Brookline, Miss Doris Gaffney and Walter Gaffney of North Abington and Stuart Briggs of East Weymouth were the guests of Miss Ruth A. Nash on Friday evening at the minstrel show.

—Mr. and Mrs. Riordon and daughter Lois, who have been spending the winter in Boston, have returned to their home on North street.

—Mr. and Mrs. Karl Hurlburt and son Graham are spending the week in New York city.

—It's interesting to know that the Senior Christian Endeavor is one of the three honor roll societies in the State of Massachusetts, every member in the society taking the Christian Endeavor World. The other two honor roll societies are in Clark C. E. Union also.

French Revolutionary Leader.

Georges Jacques Danton (1759-1794) was one of the leaders of the French Revolution and foremost in organizing and conducting the attack on the Tuileries, and bringing, together with Robespierre, royalty to the scaffold. He afterward was condemned by the revolutionary tribunal as an accomplice in a conspiracy for the restoration of the monarchy and was executed.

Historic Herb House.

It is not widely known, except to the trade, that Madison, Ind., has the largest and perhaps the oldest herb house in the United States, which has existed since 1854. It collects from various parts of the country and distributes to many parts of the world approximately 100 varieties of leaves and roots known in the business as crude drugs.

Worth Remembering.

Just before going to sleep a bit of imagination regarding achievement possibilities of the morrow will steadily and increasingly bear fruit, particularly if all ideas of difficulty, worry or fear are resolutely ruled out and replaced by those of accomplishment and smiling courage.—Dr. Frederick Pierce.

Pompey's Pillar.

Pompey's Pillar is a beautiful red granite Corinthian column in Alexandria. The inscriptions show it was erected in 302 A. D., in honor of the Emperor Diocletian. No one knows how it came to be called Pompey's, except that he was assassinated in Alexandria 350 years before the date of the column.

Measurement Almost Perfect.

Electric pyrometry, as the measurement of temperature by electric means is called, has been so far perfected that it is applicable from near the absolute zero—about 490 degrees Fahrenheit below the ordinary zero—to the temperature of melting platinum, more than 3,000 degrees above zero.

Thackeray.

He blew on his pipe, and words came tripping round him like children, like pretty little children who are perfectly drilled for the dance; or came, did he will it, treading in their precedence, like kings, gloomily.—Max Beerbohm.

Cannot Prey on Small Fish.

The big whalebone whale has so small a throat that it cannot swallow fish of ordinary size. Its food consists of little life forms found in the sea. The toothed whales eat any living thing they can catch.

WALSH AND PHELAN

Thomas F. Phelan, a live newspaper man of Boston, speaking at the K. of C. breakfast, told of the many tricks and ideas newspaper men are compelled to originate to get a scoop. He was assistant city editor of the Boston American at the time of the coal strike some years ago, when Theodore Roosevelt was President. Newspapers everywhere were trying to get the President to say something on the situation, but without success. Reporters were camping on the President's trail, waiting for some word on what he proposed to do.

Mr. Phelan's chief got word that the President was on his way to Maine in his yacht and might stop at Boston. The assistant editor informed a friend called "Windy" Hill to have his pad and pencil ready as the former was assigned to interview President Roosevelt on the coal crisis. "It was a hard task to give a man, but newspaper offices know no such word as fail—you must deliver the goods".

THOMAS F. PHELAN

Mr. Phelan's opportunity came, however, in the shape of a firemen's band which was at the same wharf waiting to give a reception to the York City, Pa., firemen. Their boat was to dock a little ahead of the Presidential yacht. He suggested to the Chief of the Fire Department that it would be fitting to give an impromptu welcome to the President. That gentleman fell in with the idea, and placed him in charge. The latter had all arrangements completed just as President Roosevelt started down the gangplank to the tune of "Hail to the Chief". A large crowd had gathered, so when the President stepped on the wharf, Mr. Phelan grasped his hand and said, "Welcome to our city". "Bully" said the President.

Turning to the crowd Phelan exclaimed, "Ladies and gentlemen, President Roosevelt is in our city, and will speak to you on the coal situation". The popular President was always known to take a joke good-naturedly, and he responded in words on the coal strike that resounded throughout the country. It is a matter of history that President Roosevelt afterwards put his words into direct action.

Mr. Phelan is a past grand knight of St. Croix council, K. of C.

NOBODY LIKES TO WASH DISHES OR OTHER DISAGREEABLE TASKS

Many Unnecessary Motions Made in Washing Dishes.

(Prepared by the United States Department of Agriculture.)

Have you ever timed yourself washing dishes, or doing any of the other less agreeable tasks, to see whether there was any way of shortening the work? Or noticed what motions you make with your hands during this and other daily jobs? Or how many steps you take in connection with a meal, particularly when you are clearing the table and washing the china and other utensils used during the meal and its preparation? Every motion requires energy, and unnecessary motions use up unnecessary energy, leaving one fatigued with no real gain. And when actual minutes are saved, they can be put to more interesting uses than the routine of daily dishwashing.

One of the best ways to observe yourself, says the United States Department of Agriculture, is to make a time, method and motion study of the different duties about the house. It will add zest to the housework, help to make one see measures necessary for reform, and make one ready to assist an inefficient neighbor.

Use Unnecessary Energy.

Starting with dishwashing: There are several ways of attacking the task. Try the way you are doing the work, observing as you go whether there are any motions made which could be eliminated, or if any part of the process could be shortened. For instance, those who possess dishwashing machines expect to leave the dishes to dry themselves after being washed and rinsed with very hot water. This principle can be applied perfectly well to dishes draining in a basket if a kettleful of clean, hot rinsing water is poured over them. The process of wiping can then be entirely eliminated, except possibly for the glass and silver. Fewer towels are thus used, and the amount of washing of tea-towels is reduced.

Look at the details in the above picture and see how many time and motion saving suggestions it contains, although the housewife evidently has only a farm kitchen with few conveniences. She does not even possess a drain board, which would be very desirable if placed on her left where the table now is. Right-handed persons ordinarily hold what they are washing in the left hand, and apply the mop or dish cloth with the right, so that when the dish is set on a drain board at the left they do not have to cross their hands. In spite of this simple and obvious way of doing the work, it is common to find in houses offered for sale or for rent a right-hand drain board, installed probably by some masculine architect who did not think out the process of doing the work or consult any woman about it. Having two drain boards, a drain board at the left and a level shelf at the right-hand side of the sink for stacking the soiled dishes is even more convenient than having only one drain board.

Many Steps Saved.

There is only one tap shown in the picture, and the large kettle on the stove suggests that the housekeeper has to heat all the water she needs. Running hot water is a great boon, but not available in all homes. Steps have been saved in this instance by placing the sink fairly near the stove, and by bringing all the dishes from the dining table into the kitchen on the tea-cart. Utensils that hang up are put on hooks on the wall right over the sink; and evidently all the pots and pans were washed before the meal was served, which greatly shortens the time for the entire job of dishwashing.

The sink is several inches higher than the table, so that the housewife does not have to stoop over it. When the clean dishes are set in the drain basket the task will be done, as nearly all of them will probably be wanted on the table for the next meal. If the china is to be put away, a set of shelves within reach of the sink would save many steps.

PREPARE GELATIN IN VARIETY OF DISHES

Attractive Desserts Are Relished by Young and Old.

Succulent Fruits and Fruit Ices Are Particularly Acceptable After Comparatively Heavy Meal—Recipe for Pudding.

(Prepared by the United States Department of Agriculture.)

Gelatin can be used in the preparation of a great variety of attractive desserts which are liked by young as well as by old and are for this reason convenient for occasional use in families where adults and children must both be provided for. Gelatin is used in such small amounts that it cannot be relied upon to furnish much nourishment. It takes up a large amount of water, however, and forms bulky or light desserts. Such desserts, which include also succulent fruits and fruit ices, are particularly acceptable after a comparatively heavy meal. Gelatin is a good means of introducing fruit juices, and to some extent also vegetable juices like those of tomatoes and cucumbers, into the diet. These juices contain vitamins, some of which are probably destroyed by heat, so that it is well to know a variety of ways of serving them raw. One of these ways is in the form of gelatin desserts. The following recipe is recommended by the United States Department of Agriculture.

Snow Pudding.

1 tablespoonful granulated gelatin.	¾ cup sugar.
¼ cup cold water.	¼ cup lemon juice.
1 cup boiling water.	Whites of three eggs.

Soak gelatin in the cold water and then dissolve it in hot water. After adding the sugar and lemon juice, strain and set aside to cool, stirring occasionally. When it is quite thick, beat with an egg beater. Add the well-beaten egg whites and continue to beat until it is stiff enough to hold its shape. Mold or pile by spoonfuls on a glass dish. Serve with a soft custard made with the egg yolks.

Variety can be obtained in this dish by substituting fruit juices for all or part of the water. Fruit juices like those of grapes and berries that are not injured in flavor by heat can be used in place of the water for dissolving the gelatin, though this may destroy some of the vitamins.

WHOLESOME FOOD FOR CHILD

Where Given Quart of Milk and Butter on Bread Avoid All Kinds of Fatty Foods.

(Prepared by the United States Department of Agriculture.)

There is more than an ounce of fat (at least two and one-half level tablespoonfuls) in a quart of whole milk. If the healthy child is given a quart of milk, and has butter on his bread, he gets enough fat, and that which he receives is in wholesome form. It is well, therefore, the United States Department of Agriculture believes, not to give children such fatty foods as pastry, fried meats, doughnuts or rich cakes, as experience has shown that in these the fats are not in so good a form for them. If the child is constipated, the occasional use of cream or salad oil is desirable, for fat in abundance is laxative.

JUST FUN

THE MAIN THING

"Constable, I don't believe I was going more than 20 miles an hour."

"I timed ye."

"With that tin watch?"

"Yes."

"I refuse to accept such evidence."

Too Old to Kiss.

The caller, who was neither youthful nor of prepossessing appearance, anxious to gain the confidence of the son of the house, remarked pleasantly, "Why, Bobbie, how grown up you are! But still, you are not too old to kiss, are you?"

"No," said Bobby, with conviction, "but you are."

Local Spirit.

"I understand Crimson Gulch is going to build a new jail."

"Yes," replied Cactus Joe. "The first proposition was to build a new hotel, but we decided that if there was to be any further housing accommodations they ought to be for the benefit of our own citizens."—Washington Star.

Disarming Suspicion.

"The dealer made you pay more than this picture is worth," commented the artist.

"I know it," answered Mr. Cumrox. "I'm selling him a piece of property, and I want to convey the impression that I am guileless and easy."—Washington Star.

Not His Choice.

A Scottish minister, marrying a couple of his rustic parishioners, was disconcerted by the bridegroom's answer when asked if he was willing to take the woman for his wedded wife.

"Aye, I'm willin'," was the reply, "but I'd rather have her sister."

And Then You May.

Mr. Slough (at the wheel)—Don't you feel a little chilly? Don't you think you had better have something around you?

Miss Quicke—Well, wait till we get a little farther out into the country, George.

Helpful Ailment.

"Your friend Bagley is quite witty, even though he does stammer."

"Even though he does? Man alive, that's the very reason he's witty; his affliction gives him plenty of time to think up good repartee."—Boston Evening Transcript.

WHY NOT?

"What's Mrs. Sea Cow doing nowa-days?"

"Oh, she's keeping a dairy."

A Hard Lot.

An only daughter's lot is hard,
For sisters oft she wishes,
'Twould be so nice to have a few
To help her with the dishes.

Where He Falls Down.

"I admit," pouted the wife, "that you are always polite to me in company, except—"

"Except what?"

"Except that you seem to forget the saying that 'Two is company.'"

Of Course.

"When you send your poetical effusions to the magazines do you call them poems or verses?"

"When I send them out I call them verses; when they come back I call them reverses."

A Measure of Dignity.

Mother—George, what would you do if another boy called you a story teller?

George (aged six)—To my face?

"Yes."

"About how big a boy?"

Competent Witness.

Judge—You are charged with arson.

Prisoner—Call my wife. She can testify that I never started a fire since I've been married to her.

The Radio Scores.

Barrister—But couldn't you let me have some of his love letters?

Breach of Promise Client—There weren't any—we had wireless sets.

Tom—Do you intend to go abroad on your wedding trip when you get married?

Local Industry at Home-Beautiful Exposition

Complete Water Gas Plant to be in Operation

An example of what can be accomplished thru co-operation is shown in the exhibit of the NEW ENGLAND GAS INDUSTRY AT THE HOME BEAUTIFUL EXPOSITION which opens April 21 to May 5, 1923.

A miniature WATER GAS PLANT in operation will be exhibited.

The Gas manufactured in the miniature plant will be furnished to the small, specially constructed appliances in the Model Home. The plant which will be seen in constant operation during the Exhibition, is constructed to a scale of one inch to the foot, and is capable of making 100 cubic feet of Gas per hour.

As an educational exhibit, that is of human interest, this is probably one of the most remarkable miniature plants and Model Houses ever assembled.

A miniature GAS BUNGALOW was exhibited last October at Atlantic City, during the convention of the American Gas Association. It created so much interest that it will shortly start on a tour of the principal cities of the United States.

You will find this house completely furnished and equipped with miniature Gas Appliances, all in actual operation.

It contains a living room, bedroom, bathroom and kitchen. The living room has an open fireplace with a miniature room heater, which functions perfectly.

There is a semi-indirect dome light in the living room and other lighting fixtures.

In the kitchen is a Gas Range, complete in every detail. It has a modern heat control for the oven and the convenient lighter for the top burners.

Of course the Bungalow is provided with a never-failing hot water supply from an automatic hot water heater.

The set tubs and sink are supplied with hot and cold water.

Small rolls can be baked in the oven and potatoes and other vegetables boiled on the range. It is only one-quarter size, but it works perfectly.

In addition to the Bungalow and Gas Plant other exhibits that will attract attention are:

Complete Meter Exhibit: Manufacturing, testing and sealing.

Meter Prover: To show how meters are tested for accuracy; how they cannot be tampered with; and how they are sealed.

Large Display Meter: Showing how to properly read your meter.

Calorimeter: To determine the B. T. U. (heat value) in each cubic foot of Gas, as well as the quality of the Gas. This is the same instrument used by the state to test Gas in various parts of the territory of each Gas Company.

An exhibit to demonstrate the proper adjustment of all Gas Burners to secure the greatest efficiency from Gas

THE WAYS OF THE MODE IN TAILORED MILLINERY

THE way of the mode, in all kinds of spring millinery, leads to elaboration; hats are intricate, and there is much work on them. Even the tailored hat which is expected to be somewhat plain as compared with its dressy companion, is an affair of elaborately made ornaments or braiding or tucking, and of unusual shapes.

At least half of the shapes, whether for street, sports or dressy wear, are covered with highly lustrous fabrics. These are mostly peculiarly millinery fabrics, although taffeta silk, and some other silks, bear them company.

The majority of hats have drooping brims founded on the bell and the poke shapes. But there are off-the-face shapes, tricorns, turbans and toques so that the choice is wide enough to insure a becoming style to everyone.

VIVACITY OF STYLE MARKS THE NEW SEASON'S COATS

THE drama of the styles in spring coats has an interesting cast in which "Line" appears to play the leading role and "Fur" is an actor of much increased prominence. Fabrics are as they have been, soft and velvety—styles in the main simple, but so well managed that the new season's coats are flattering affairs. They have a smartness and a vivacity that will endear them to their wearers.

Summer furs have established themselves as a part of the play in the spring wardrobe and their becomingness brings grist to the mill of the designer of coats. Privileged to use them in the first spring models for collars, they appeared in the earliest showing—and received the glad hand of welcome. Other models have followed, with cuffs as well as collars of fur.

Two models have been chosen for illustration here—both with a bit of fur in their make-up and styled with an eye to becomingness as well as practical all-round wearing qualities. The coat at the left has a short yoke, supporting a straight-line body that has sufficient fullness for comfort and achieves long, graceful unbroken lines, emphasized by the wide, loose strap trim at each side. The short-haired fur collars on coats of this character are usually in the same color as the coat.

Monday Club Closes Successful Year

As a climax of the year's program of activities the Monday Club held its annual luncheon and meeting last Monday. Over one hundred members attended. The decorations for the luncheon carried out the club colors of violet and yellow and the tables looked very attractive. A very delicious luncheon was served, Mrs. Henry J. Starr being hostess assisted by a large committee. The meeting was called to order by President Mrs. Annie J. Libby and the business of the afternoon was taken up.

As retiring president, Mrs. Libby addressed the club thanking the officers, committees and members for their great assistance during her term of office. She then called for and received reports from the following officers and chairmen of committees. Mrs. Perley Buchanan reported for the education committee. Mrs. James B. Jones reported for the flower committee, stating that flowers had been provided for the president's stand which had later been sent to sick members, and that in the case of deaths flowers had been sent. Miss Adriana Corino made a report for the hall committee. Mrs. Ida Sylvester reported that the home economics committee had cleared $40 for the club. A detailed report was given by Mrs. Gray Stevens, chairman of the social committee in regard to luncheons and teas, and also the property of the club. Mrs. Lillian Gladwin made the report for the Legislative committee. A particularly inspiring report was received from Mrs. George Ames of the music committee. Mrs. Gladwin also made a report for the public health committee in the absence of the chairman, Mrs. Lucy Libby, that milk furnished by the club to a small child was benefiting her greatly. Later it was voted to continue this. Custodian of guest book, Mrs. C. E. Stiles, stated that the club had entertained 176 guests, of which 159 were paid guests. Federation Secretary, Mrs. Alice Pierce Jewell stated that she had no special report to make. Press correspondent Mrs. Carl F. Prescott made her report in regard to articles in the newspapers concerning activities of the club. These reports were all very interesting and were evidence of the good work handled by the chairmen of committees and as a fitting climax the report of recording secretary Mrs. Florence E. Corthell was received. This was a resume of the year's work and is given below in full:

ANNUAL REPORT

Following is the annual report of the secretary:

Another year's work of the Monday Club has been brought to its close and it truly has been a year well spent. The club has held fourteen regular meetings including the one today. Eleven have been held in the Congregational church, two in Masonic Temple and one in Odd Fellows hall. Seven meetings have been held by the board of directors at the home of the president, Mrs. J. H. Libby.

The club year started with a membership of two hundred and thirty and at its close two hundred and forty-two names are enrolled in the membership book.

Death has taken four of our members from us, Mrs. Eliza N. Smith, Mrs. Sarah H. Pierce, Mrs. Amos W. Locke, and Mrs. George H. Bass. From the opening meeting in October, through the months that followed the average attendance has been exceptionally good. It hardly seems necessary to speak of our entertainments because I am sure that every member can recall in a moment's thinking the splendid afternoons that we have had together. Miss Virginia Allen Grilley, who entertained us at the opening meeting; the very interesting and instructive talk given by Ferie Felix Weiss; our "Trip across the country" with Mr. Pearson, and "Our travels in the Alps" with Professor Fay.

I am sure we cannot forget the dramatic recital of "The Mollusc" by Mary Kathryn North or "The Boomerang" by Elizabeth Whiting.

Then again as we went "Through Syrian streets and doorways" with Mary Parker Dunning and the afternoon that Aunt Clarissa's Heirlooms" were loaned to us through Mrs. M. Gertrude Cutter.

The organ recital by Miss Edith Lang assisted by Mr. Norman Arnold was another delightful afternoon and the Joseph Ecker Trio" will long be remembered.

Our guests were entertained on Nov. 6 by the Hazel Child's entertainers and the children had a splendid time together on New Year's Day.

The High School Glee club and High school orchestra were with us on two afternoons and it was a pleasure to listen to their fine program.

The annual club play given on April 9 was pronounced a success, and the luncheon today brings us to the parting of the ways for a few months.

We have had six socials, entertained Federation officers, our district instructor, Hingham Club, Old Colony Club, and teachers of Weymouth.

Delegates have been sent to the conventions and most interesting reports have been brought back to us.

Music and readings have been furnished by club members.

Flowers provided by the flower committee have been sent to the sick and shut-ins after the meetings.

The officers of the club were entertained by our president at her home April 2 and a most delightful afternoon was enjoyed by all present.

As we close our year may we all feel that it has been good for us to be a member of the Monday club.

Respectfully submitted,
FLORENCE E. CORTHELL,
Recording secretary

Reports for the year were then received from treasurer Mrs. Bertha L. Bryant, corresponding secretary Mrs. Isabelle Easton and the auditing committee.

Mrs. Libby reported that the contribution of Mrs. H. C. Alvord of South Weymouth had been used to purchase a silk flag and standard, so the club now owns a very handsome flag.

Mrs. Alice P. Jewell, Mrs. Annie J. Libby and Mrs. Jennie B. Worster were selected as delegates to the State conference at Swampscott. Mrs. Jennie B. Worster was also made a delegate to the National convention at Atlanta, Ga.

A plea was made for books for the seamen of American Marine, Weymouth's quota being 500, of which a very small number had been received. If such books are left at the residence of Mrs. Libby they will be delivered to the proper parties.

It was voted to hold a whist party very soon for the benefit of Weymouth Hospital and a committee was elected to make arrangements for this worthy benefit.

Contributions for the year were made as follows: American College at Springfield $10, Infantile Paralysis Commission $10, Army and Navy membership $15, Jewett Repertoire $5. The report of the nominating committee was then received and accepted and the following were elected to office for the ensuing year:

PRESIDENT
MRS. ALICE PIERCE JEWELL

FIRST VICE PRESIDENT
MRS. BESSIE K. HUNT

SECOND VICE PRESIDENT
MRS. M. ELIZABETH ALDEN

RECORDING SECRETARY
MRS. GEORGE AMES

CORRESPONDING SECRETARY
MRS. ISABELLE EASTON

MRS. BERTHA L. BRYANT

MRS. PERLEY BUCHANAN
MRS. C. E. STILES

MISS HAZEL HOLLIS

CUSTODIAN
MRS. LEAH ROCKWOOD

Mrs. Libby paid a splendid tribute to the work of Mrs. Jewell when she was president 1919—1921 and to the wonderful help which she had given Mrs. Libby during her term of office. With a few words of farewell and a "God be with you" as expressed by the word "goodbye", she turned over the gavel to Mrs. Jewell. Mrs. Jewell responded by saying that it seemed like returning home to become president again; the "family" in the meantime having been well cared for. She made the very urgent request that each and every member of the club get in touch with her personally within the next two weeks (before the first meeting of the new executive board) to criticise or offer suggestions for the coming year.

The meeting then adjourned, the members leaving with the feeling that a very successful year's work had been completed.

BUSINESS ASSOCIATION

The membership contest between the "Self-starters" headed by Mr. Justice, and the "Go-getters" headed by Mr. Dunning, is bringing out a lot of good-natured raillery. The selfstarters, running true to form got going earlier in the race, but the gogetters finally got started and now its a regular tug of war.

The merchants are seeing the possibilities of association and the townspeople sense the importance of better business—better understanding and better appreciation of home talent and industry.

This business association is going to develop a high morale and an esprit de corps that will bring prosperity, goodwill, loyalty and pride to everyone in the town. As Harold Cary puts it: "When anyone comes to love a town that is an asset; when everyone does, the combined assets become well-nigh priceless".

Editor Gazette-Transcript:

Last Friday night there was a fine entertainment in Gem theatre under the direction of the Legion. Automobiles lined Commercial street on both sides of the street all the way from Gem hteatre to the depot.

Of one of these I wish to speak. Someone left a dog in his car, probably to protect the car, but that dog barked and howled from 8 o'clock until after the entertainment when the people who came in it went home. The whole community was frantic with the noise made by the dog.

It seemed an unkind, thoughtless thing to do to worry a whole neighborhood in such a way.

I thought I would speak of it and hope this may reach the eve of the person who left the car and dog in this way and ask them to please never to repeat the offense. It certainly was a terrible evening to worry through. A barking, howling dog is bad enough for a short time, but to have it last two hours or over disturbing everybody is worse.

May it never happen again.

THE HOLIDAYS

The first thing many people look for when they hang up the new calendar is to see what days of the week the different holidays fall on during the coming year. So here's the record for 1923:

New Year's Day, Monday;
Washington's Birthday, Thursday;
Evacuation Day, Saturday;
Patriots' Day, Thursday;
Memorial Day, Wednesday;
Bunker Hill Day, Sunday;
Independence Day, Wednesday;
Labor Day, Monday, Sept. 3;

Gold Leaf.

The process of making gold leaf has been known since the Eighth century B. C. It is found in connection with the most ancient known mummies, having been used for covering teeth, tongue, skin, and so on. Sometimes it is found on the coffins. Gold leaf was also used on the tombs and monuments of ancient Egypt. In the Eleventh century it seems to have attained as high a degree of perfection as today.

Mahogany Woodwork.

Mahogany was first introduced in Europe by a Captain Gibbons, who, thinking it worthless, ballasted his ship with the wood when returning from the West Indies. Woolaston, a cabinet-maker in Long Acre, London, made a bureau for the captain's brother, and the wood was so admired that it quickly became fashionable and valuable.

Oak the Monarch.

Among our most useful and valuable trees are the white oak and the red oak, which produce a brown-colored hardwood of remarkable durability, says School Book of Forestry. The white oak is the monarch of the forest, as it lives very long and is larger and stronger than the majority of its associates.

A Concealed Statue.

There is in the Crystal palace, near London, an equestrian statue 30 feet high. In 1859 it was decided to be too heavy to move, and the present grand orchestra was built up around it. Of the millions that frequent the palace, few have any suspicion of the statue's existence.—Scientific American.

Sweden Conserves Lumber.

In Sweden, stumps in the forest seldom exceed three inches in height. Top logs are bunched and strapped with steel wire and floated to the nearest charcoal plant. The sawlogs generally include anything that will measure seven inches in diameter at the top.

Mammals That Lay Eggs.

The duck-billed platypus of Australia is the most curious instance of mammals that lay eggs. The nest is underground, has two entrances, and may contain from one to three eggs. The ant-eating porcupine is another egg-laying creature.

Island of Guam.

The island of Guam, in the Pacific, which we acquired in 1898, is 5,044 miles from San Francisco and 1,506 miles from Manila. It is 30 miles long and 100 miles around, and boasts a population of 13,000.

Sacred Heart Church For "Bigger Movement"

Wednesday night the men of Sacred Heart church gathered, one hundred strong, Pythian hall. It was a community dinner—the idea being to solidly put Sacred Heart church back of the "bigger Weymouth movement".

All of the guests of honor spoke and enough enthusiasm was generated to run the town for some time to come. Rev. Mr. Justice spoke of the wonderful benefits of co-operation in every walk of life.

Father Holland recalled his early experiences in the town—placed the example of Brockton before the men—and solidly arrayed himself arrayed back of the "bigger, better Weymouth development".

Duncan MacKeliar of Quincy emphasized the importance of getting together. He brought out the great possibilities of the Boy Scout movement and laid stress upon the fact that the boys of today are the bosses of tomorrow and we should start early in developing the business men of ten years from now.

Mr. Hall, president of the Weymouth Business Association and General Manager of the Old Colony Gas Co., laid the aims and aspirations of the Association before the crowd and won the whole gathering over by the sincerity of his remarks and the possibilities open to Weymouth—and by the pictures he painted of this great get-together movement.

William P. Kelley, assistant district attorney of the county, spoke of the responsibilities of jury duty and the civic pride that should animate all business men called to serve on juries.

Thomas McCarthy, Grand Knight of Weymouth council, K. of C., brought the greetings of the knights and their assurance that in all constructive work in which the village was interested we could count on the undivided support of the Knights of Columbus.

Mr. Mulligan, representing the Electric Light Co., spoke of the difference that time is bringing about—when representatives of two public service corporations should be invited to address public gatherings. "Not alone" he said, "do our consumers entertain and feast us tonight, but they actually honor us by having us address them. Instead of being in the position of fighting our customers, we find ourselves their guests. Weymouth is surely getting to be a wondrful place to work in".

Patrick Corrigan, representing the leather industry, gave specific examples of success, due to co-operation and expressed his undivided allegiance to any movement that was going to make Weymouth a bigger and bettter place to live in.

After the dinner was served, an entertainment was furnished. Mrs. Caroline Corridan Gallant presided at the piano, Miss Irwin gave a reading, Miss McKenzie gave some vocal selections, Miss Pauline Ahern, piano solos, George Walsh, humorous readings, and Mr. Boncelli, readings.

The committee in charge of this event consisted of Messrs Hart, De Lora, Murray, McCormick, Riley, Shea, and Ahern.

"THE HOUSE IN LAUREL LANE"

The C. I. C.'s, a girls' club, composed of members of Mrs. J. A. Melville's Sunday school class, gave the two-act comedy, "The House in Laurel Lane" at the church vestry Wednesday evening, with the following cast of characters:

Others in the caste were: Ada Rosetter, Hilda Crowder, Margaret Drake Vera Parker, Roma Donovan, Thelma Salsgeber, Barbara Libby, Louise Starr, Margurite Alexanderson, and Isabelle Tutty.

Miss Dorothy Snow of Quincy read several selections. There was also a sale of fancy articles, candy and ice cream. The proceeds of the sale and entertainment are to go towards the piano fund for the primary department.

Piano duets were rendered by Mrs. Gerald Kelso and Miss Blanchard, and a vocal duet by Miss Blanchard and Miss Martin.

Smith, and Saunders, the butler, Malcolm French. Violin solos by Miss Bessie Reed of Quincy, accompanied by Mrs. George Reed, and vocal solos by Mrs. Marjorie Hughes.

McDONALD—FITZGERALD

Wednesday afternoon Catherine Julia Fitzgerald, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Patrick J. Fitzgerald, was married at the Immaculate Conception church to Thomas Joseph McDonald, son of Mr. and Mrs. John P. McDonald. Rev. C. I. Riordon performed the ceremony.

Miss Mary Gauthier of East Weymouth was bridesmaid and Lawrence F. Nugent of Somerville was best man. There was a reception afterward at the home of the bride's parents. The bride and groom left on a wedding trip to New York and Atlantic City. They will live at 1111 Commercial street, East Weymouth.

The groom is a veteran of Co. K, 101st Infantry, Yankee Division. He was wounded, twice in action. Mr. Nugent, the best man, was a "buddy" of the groom in Co. K.

THE CAMPAIGN IS ON

The merchants of Weymouth are ready to co-operate with you in the Clean-Up and Paint-Up campaign. Just make your house and your grounds as attractive as page one of the second section of the Gazette, and much will be accomplished. The campaign will continue during the month of May.

AN APPRECIATION

The financial results from the "Daisy Drive" has been most gratifying. The wonderful co-operation of the Women's Auxiliary was very instrumental in the success of the drive. This co-operation of the Auxiliary, always present in all the efforts of the Post in its work, especially for the comrades who are in hospitals or who are in need of assistance, has always been a great inspiration to us.

The selection of the daisy was an specially happy thought as the insignia of gracious co-operation on the part of our friends. Flowers are cheery messengers, carrying to our friends the message of loving friendship.

Total amount collected, $442.25. From this amount is deducted the xepenses of materials used, daisies boxes and sashes amounting to $87.85 leaving a balance of $354.40. In conformity with ordrs from Department headquarters the Post retains 80 per cent of this amount which amounts to $283.52 and the remaining 20 per cent, $70.88, to be forwarded to Department Headquarters.

The Post wishes to thank most heartily all of its good friends who helped to make the drive so successful.

The "Self Starters" Get A Move On

Almost over night the mysterious signs, "Go-Getters" and "Self-Starters" have appeared in the store windows of Weymouth Landing and East Braintree. In fact the store without this tag of co-operation begins to look sort o' lonesome. For the new business association certainly stands for co-operation in boosting home trade. Courtesy, service, good goods, and the good-will that comes of working together for the benefit of all is going to draw business. Residents are beginning to feel the impetus of the idea. It is catching the imagination of the townspeople.

The membership contest is waxing warm. Last week the "Go-Getters" numbered thirty; they have added eight more. The "Self-Starters" have been stepping on the gas. Last week they had sixteen, adding this week 25; totals, "Go-Getters" 38, "Self-Starters" 42. The Association now numbers eighty.

The drive for one hundred charter members continues. As we go to press, the following are the lists:

RECEPTION TO PASTOR

Tuesday evening a reception was given to all those who had been taken into the church during the past conference year in the vestry of the First M. E. church. A supper to which all members and friends of the church were cordially invited preceded the program of the evening. After the supper everyone took part in a song service followed by a few words by the pastor. As it was the regular night for prayer service a short talk by the pastor with prayer was entered into.

B. B. Sylvester, as president of the board of trustees, then welcomed Rev. and Mrs. Story back for their third year; to which welcome Mr. Story responded with appropriate words.

Mrs. F. Wayland Preston, president of the Ladies Social Circle then presented Mrs. Story with a beautiful bouquet of pink carnations.

All the new members for the year were called forward and given the right hand of fellowship by the other members of the church.

A social hour followed in which four teams were made for stunts of various nature after which games were enjoyed by the young folks. The evening program closed with the singing of the "Doxology" by the entire audience.

Such an affair presages a successful year for the church and with the co-operation of every member and parishioner pulling together with the pastor, first church should see one of the best years ever.

BIG SCORE GAME

Weymouth High was walloped on Wednesday by Abington High at the Clapp Memorial Field to the tune of 22 to 12.

The home team took the lead, and at the end of the second inning the score was 2 to 0 in their favor. At the end of the fourth it was 6 to 4, but the fifth and sixth were fatal, as Abington scored 11 in the sixth.

Both teams battted heavy, Abington with 24 hits scoring 22, and Weymouth with 12 hits scoring 12. Abington made four errors and Weymouth 5.

The score by innings was:

LAND VALUES

One more summary of assessed land values at South Weymouth, and one more at North Weymouth will be printed, which will conclude the series in the Gazette, unless readers express a desire to have other streets printed. The publication represents considerable research work, as reference must be made to several books and to the Assessors' maps, and property is continually changing ownership. The publishers feel well repaid, for time and space given, because of the interest which has been aroused, and comments made.

Battle to Keep Errors Down.

Friendship is sentiment, but it is more than that. It is of the head, but chiefly of the heart. He who has intellectualism only can have no friends. This is because both the mind and the heart enter into the cultivation of friendship.

MANY RELICS

Editor Gazette-Transcript:

In view of the necessary large expenditures of this year it is no doubt best for the town to forego any expensive anniversary celebration, such as might be deemed necessary to attract people outside Weymouth, but how about our own people. Aren't thy worthy of consideration?

Possibly we can create a maximum of interest at a minimum of expense. Here are a few suggestions:

There is in Ward 2 a fine model of the nail machines used by the Weymouth Iron Co. many years ago, made by "Ben" Rice, one of the pioneers of Weymouth's nail industry.

Another resident has a big map of that company's property, 80 or more years ago. Doubtless there are other such relics.

On our kitchen wall, 65 years ago, hung a map of Weymouth, giving the names of each owner or resident; the map being surrounded with the pictures of all the "meeting houses" in town. There must be some of them in existence today.

Hung side by side with the work of our town engineer for the last ten years they would surely be interesting.

Then a collection of old shoemakers' kit used before the days of machinery: lapstones, peg cutters, straps with stirrup to hold the shoe on the knees, skiving machines, and hand-rolling machines. Probably some pegged and hand-sewed "kip" knee boots. These are but a few of the things that would be found once the search is begun.

Then the old furniture always owned in Weymouth. How about spinning wheels, foot stoves, warming pans, etc. and in the kitchen: Dutch ovns, Yankee bakers, pestle and motar, etc.

Fancy needle work, samplers, "log cabin" quilts, and such, might be composed with the exhibits of our schools.

And wouldn't our manual training pupils like to see an old carpenter and joiner's kit.

There were joiners that could join in those days.

Must not forget farming tools, beetles moulds, flails. Know what a flail is? Get a bright boy or girl to study up on some one article, and explain it's use to the rest of us.

On the walls might be hung portraits of those whom the town loved to honor in former days and it may be deguereotypes and ambrotypes of sixty and sventy years ago.

These might be shown under glass.

Really there is a wealth of rare things tucked away in our closets, attics, chests, and bureau drawers, and the problem might be to draw the line between that which is available and that we can use. We could use one of our school buildings during the summer vacation. And once startd the young people can be depended upon to do more than their part. Let's all of us act as a committee of the whole to add to and improve these suggestions offered as a starter. We can easily have an exhibit that will interest us who are privileged to live in Weymouth—the fame of which may spread beyond our borders and rival even that of Tut-Ankh-Amen at Luxor. Why not?

HOW TO RECEIVE WNAC

Radiophans who use receiving sets employing a crystal detector have found some difficulty in tuning in on the broadcasts from WNAC at Sheppard's store, since that station reduced its wave length from 360 to 286 meters. The cause of this trouble, says the radio editor of the Globe, is traceable to either of two conditions: the tendency of listeners to adhere to the same settings of the receiver controls in order to receive the 286-meter wave as was formerly used to tune in the station on 360 meters or the employment of excessively large antennae.

Obviously if the settings of the dials on a receiver mean anything at all as regards the values of coils and condensers associated in the tuning circuits it cannot be expected of the receiver that it will respond to a wave of 286 meters when tuned to receive one of of 360 meters. The remedy for this is to try to time the receiver so that the signal strength will be a maximum without regard to where the dials were formerly set for best reception. If a tuning coil is used fewer turns should be included in the active portion of the coil when it is desired to reduce the wavelength.

In most instances the difficulty listeners are experiencing in tuning in WNAC is due to the use of large antennae. Only this morning a man seeking a solution to his receiving problem admitted that he did have a "pretty good antenna". He stated that it was "all of 250 feet long". An "expert" had advised that the larger the antenna the "more powerful" the results.

There is no excuse for an antenna more than 125 feet in length if it is intended for broadcast reception at the present time. In fact an antenna consisting of a single wire 75 to 100 feet long is plenty long enough. The smaller the antenna the greater the number of turns of wire which may be used in the tuning coil. And the greater the number of turns used in the tuning coil the greater will be the signal voltage impressed across the crystal and the louder will be the signal response in the head phones.

If it is not convenient to reduce the size (length) of your antenna then your next resort is to a small fixed condenser connected in series with the antenna and the tuning coil of the receiving set. The capacity of this condenser may vary from .00025 to .0005 microfarads.

FRONT STREET LAND VALUES

In the issue of the Gazette-Transcript of March 30, the assessed values of 1922 on Washington street in the vicinity of Washington Square were printed, the most valuable per square foot being the Ludden lots, the G. R. Kempl lot and the Hobart store lot.

This week values on Front street are printed and also a continuation of Commercial street as far as the second railroad crossing.

Land values on Front street seem to take a remarkable drop on leaving Washington Square. While the Hobart store lot at the corner of Washington and Front is assessed at 59 cents per square foot, the lot directly in the rear, assessed to the estate of James H. Flint, is valued at only 9 cents, the Flint homestead lot at less than 10 cents, and the Worthen homestead lot at less than 9, in fact none of the lots on the East side of Front street are valued at 10 cents per foot.

WEST SIDE FRONT STREET

On the West side of Front street land is assessed higher, one at nearly 14 cents, and eight above 10 cents. The value lot by lot is given:

Lot on corner of Washington and Front street where new bank building now stands, 15 cents.

The larger Clapp lot at less than 14 cents, and the smaller at less than 12 cents.

The Beach and Hall lots at 12 cents, and the Richmond Clapp corner lot at less than 12.

The Harlow corner lot at less than 11 cents, and the Hunt lot at less than 8 cents.

The corner lots of Husband and Harper are more valuable, at nearly 11 cents, while the Rice and Thayer lots are assessed less than 6 cents.

The Ahern lot is valued at 8 cents, the next three about 6 cents, the Emma A. Hunt corner lot at less than 8, the Whittle at 7, and the Porter lot at corner of Walnut avenue at eight.

EAST SIDE FRONT STREET

The Hobart store lot is assessed at 59 cents, the vacant Flint lot at 9 cents, the Flint homestead lot at less than 10, the Worthen homestead lot at less than 9, both lots of Emma P. Clapp at 8 cents, and the Charles A. Clapp at less than 7.

The next five lots are taxed less than 6 cents, the Perry corner lot at less than 7; the Whittle, Newman and Harris lots at 8 cents, the Stetson at less than 8, and the Hall lot less than 6 cents.

NORTH SIDE COMMERCIAL ST.

March 30 some of the values on Commercial street were printed as far as Tremont street. Beginning at that point on the northerly side, one lot of Jennie B. Worster is assessed at less than 6 cents, and one at less than 8.

The Baker lot in the rear is valued at less than 3 cents, the Cobb lot at 10, and the lot with the Bates apartments at 10 cents. The Floyd lot in the rear is assessed at less than 4 cents.

On the other side of the railroad, the Rhines property on the northerly side, including wharves, is assessed at 22 cents, the Richards coal wharves at less than 13 cents, other Richards land at 9 cents, and the Thayer homestead lot near the railroad crossing at less than 6 cents.

SOUTH SIDE COMMERCIAL ST.

The Rand homestead lot at the corner of Tremont street is assessed at less than 8 cents, the Baker lot at less than 5, the Wright and Swain lots at 2 cents, and the Jordan at less than 10 cents.

Across the railroad, the new lot of the Rhines Lumber Co. is valued at 7 cents, the Pratt lot at less than 6, the Loud lot at 5, the South lot at 6, the Gutterson at less than 4, the McDonald at 4, and the Donahue near the railroad crossing at 3 cents.

In the summary the area is given in square feet, the assessed value of the lot, and the assessed value of the buildings on the lot:

SIMPLE LACE COATS COVER FLATTERING NEGLIGEES

THE lady who is accommodatingly posing in a simple lace coat, without its underdress of crepe de chine, is doing her best to show how simple it is to fashion a negligee coat out of lace flouncing. One can see that two lengths of lace are set together, in the first place, and that the upper length is cut, to shape it to the shoulders, and the edges hemstitched together, leaving an opening for the arms. Also it is revealed that the net is rolled and caught with ribbons at intervals, about the neck opening, and that narrow satin ribbon forms bows and sash ends at the back and ties at the front, and that ribbon loops and ends finished with silk tassels adorn the arm's eyes.

Coats of lace are worn over various underdresses in charming, easily made negligees. Radium silk, crepe de chine, georgette, voile, albatross, any of the soft prettily colored and sheer dress materials will make a foundation for them. Lace adds the charm of elegance to the daintiest of them. All the pastel tinted, transparent or semi-transparent cottons are at home with them.

Among the easiest things for the home dressmaker to undertake are these charming negligees. They are simple and inexpensive affairs—when made at home—and are very flattering to their owners. Most of them are cut in kimono fashion and ribbons and laces contribute to their fascinations.

IN KNITTED SPORTSWEAR TWO TYPES ARE EXPLOITED

KNITTED outerwear has made a new realm in the world of apparel, filled with about everything that women and children wear from head to foot. With the introduction of knitted yard goods, as practical as any woven goods for the making of suits, coats and dresses, knitted frocks and suits have forged rapidly to the fore. Silk and fiber silk, mohair and camels hair, all add elements that insure great variety in knitted garments.

Knitted apparel seems properly to belong to the department of sports clothes. Even here it is elaborated so that there are two distinct types of knitted sports wear—the tailored and the fancier types. In the latter class the silk and fiber silk sweaters and coats include stunning models in which one has a feeling of being considerably dressed up. In the frocks plain and figured knitted goods are combined, the plain fabric set in, in panels at the sides or otherwise introduced in the composition of the garments.

The same classification holds for sweaters; there are the smart, plain, tailored models, with a chic all their own and the more fanciful designs. Just now the plain, tailored type, whether in wool or silk, appears to be the choice of discriminating dressers. An example of this type is pictured here. It is to be noted that it blouses at the waistline—a feature demanded by smart wearers. Its sleeves are plain and very long with snug-fitting buttoned cuffs, made of a furry wool banding which finishes the neck and the side fastening. It is a one-color affair that looks capable, comfortable and very smart.

THE CALENDAR

By MARTHA B. THOMAS

THE calendar is a curious human document when you stop to think about it. Just an easier way of reckoning than the counting of moons and suns, and a very important matter it is, too. A calendar is the director of man's affairs, the "consulting engineer" always to be interviewed before arranging life, whether it is a dinner or business appointment, a siege with the dentist or a trip abroad... It is the grand reference book; a silent, inanimate thing composed of twelve pages or sections with black marks on them... Probably no other book, large or small, has as many readers or commands the respectful interest enjoyed by its unimpeachable reputation.

AN EXPLANATION

"Had you any reason to doubt the girl's honesty?"

"None. While she was with us I missed seven silver spoons, a gold bracelet, a lot of preserves and—"

"That will do. Why did you say you didn't doubt her honesty?"

"Because I didn't think she had any honesty to doubt."

The Usual Golfer's Experience.

"You seem to enjoy golf."

"I do."

"How long have you played?"

"Fifteen years."

"And have you always enjoyed it so?"

"No. It took me fourteen years to make up my mind that I would never be the amateur champion. After that I could settle down and get some fun out of the game."

Practicing What He Preaches.

Minister's daughter (archly)—Now, Cousin George, you must come to church this evening. Father is preaching from the text, "Love Ye One Another."

Cousin George—Really, Mabel. But can't we stay at home and practice while he preaches?

Engaging a Driver.

"How long will it take us to get to the depot?" asked the man of the taxi driver.

"Fifteen minutes," replied the driver.

"All right. I've got thirty-five minutes to spare. Do you think you can get me to the depot without scaring the daylight out of me?"

HE KNOWS

"Who's minding your business while you're away, Mr. Green?"

"The neighbors, as usual."

Tricky.

"Oh, I can't thread this needle, ma,"
Was little Bessie's cry.
"Just as the thread is going through
The needle winks its eye."

Practical Charity.

"Look at that poor stray cat. I'll get it some meat."

"No, wait! I believe in teaching others to help themselves. I'll throw some crumbs to draw the birds and maybe the cat can catch one."

Urgent Business.

Mrs. Gramercy—I didn't think Mr. Needham could afford to have his family go to a fashionable resort for the winter.

Mrs. Park—It was absolutely necessary. The poor woman has two marriageable daughters on her hands.

Warned Him.

"She married him for better or for worse."

"Well?"

"Immediately after the ceremony she served notice on him that if he ever showed any signs of getting worse there would be nothing doing."

Harsh Words.

"I can't use this stuff," said the editor.

"In no way, shape or form?"

"In no way, shape or form would it be a poem. You couldn't even palm it off on an unsuspecting public as free verse."

Not for Children.

Pal—Did you read about that nonogenarians' banquet?

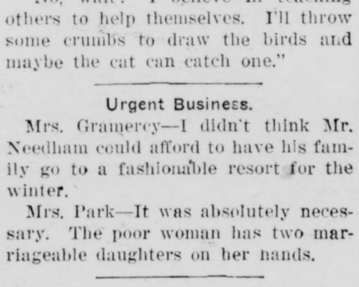

Palaver—Yes. I heard a fellow eighty-nine years old tried to get in and they told him he was too young to go to such things.

Time.

"The boss offered me an interest in the business today."

"He did?"

"Yes, he said that if I didn't take an interest pretty soon he'd fire me"—Kansas Sour Owl.

STILL KNOCKING HIM

Cholly—Let me think a minute.

Peggy—Can you keep it up that long?

Commanding.

Her beauty is commanding;
Of that there is no doubt
But you should hear it order
Her Pa and Ma about.

He Got His.

Mr. Oldbird—My dear Miss Bright, do you think it would ever be possible for you to love a man as—as old as I am?

Miss Bright—Oh, I might; if he were different from you in every other way.

Second-Hand.

She—Johnnie, I hear that your brother has the measles. When are you going to get them?

Johnnie—When he's through with them, I suppose.—Pitt Panther.

THE CITY MERCHANT NEGLECTS A GOLDEN OPPORTUNITY

When he fails to connect with the suburban trade through the medium of the local weekly. While people in the country read the city papers casually, they leave no page of their home paper unread.

They have confidence in the paper and the goods they see advertised in it. The local publisher is more careful of the kind of advertising he allows in his columns. VARIETIES OF SWEET POTATOES AND THEIR USES IN HOUSEHOLD

Sweet Potatoes May Be Served in Some Form in Almost Any Course in a Menu.

(Prepared by the United States Department of Agriculture.)

Sweet potatoes, although of tropical origin, are now grown in large quantities in the United States. According to figures for 1921, more than 98,000,000 bushels, valued at over $86,000,000, were produced in this country. Naturally the climate of the Southern states is better suited to this crop than the shorter growing season of the North, but, with early planting, sweet potatoes are grown successfully as far north as southern Michigan.

The United States Department of Agriculture has recently made a study of the different varieties of sweet potatoes now grown in the United States, and has classified them in eight groups. Under these groups are at least forty varieties having special characteristics, while the list of names by which minor varieties are known runs into the hundreds.

Sweet potatoes vary in shape and size from slender banana-shaped roots to those so large and thick as to merit the nickname of "underground squash" sometimes applied to them.

The texture, flavor and color of the flesh of sweet potatoes range from dry, mealy ones of whitish color and low sugar content, to juicy, pumpkin-colored kinds from which sweet sirup oozes during the baking.

Sweet potatoes, prepared in one form or another, may be served satisfactorily in almost any course in a menu. To take the place of white potatoes, or to combine with left-over meat, the mealy varieties should be chosen. For candied sweet potatoes, sweet potato chips, or latticed potatoes, the sweeter, more juicy kinds are best.

Sweet Potato Puff.

2 pounds of sweet potatoes. 2 teaspoonfuls of butter.
Whites of 2 eggs. ½ teaspoonful of salt.

Boil and mash sweet potatoes. Add butter, salt and stiffly beaten whites of eggs. Pour into buttered baking dish or custard cups. Bake in a medium oven 25 to 30 minutes.

Baked Sweet Potatoes (Special).

Bake six medium-sized sweet potatoes and cut them in halves lengthwise. Scoop out the inside and season it with salt, pepper and butter, and moisten with milk. Mash them and beat until light. Refill the skins with the seasoned potatoes and brown in the oven.

Escalloped Sweet Potatoes and Meat.

Cover the bottom of a buttered baking dish with cooked sliced sweet potatoes, cover with a layer of cold meat, either ground or chopped; add another layer of sweet potatoes; season with salt, pepper and butter, or meat frylngs. Moisten with gravy or water. Bake in a moderate oven until brown.

Sweet Potato Souffle With Marshmallows.

To two cupfuls of hot riced sweet potatoes add three tablespoonfuls of butter, one-half teaspoonful of salt, pepper to taste, and one-half cupful of hot milk. Beat the mixture well. Then beat two eggs separately, add yolks to the potato mixture, cut and fold in the stiffly beaten whites. Place the mixture in a buttered baking dish and place a layer of marshmallows close together over the top and brown in a slow oven.

MARKETING METHODS IMPROVED IN SOUTH

Women Ship in Weekly Eggs Graded and Guaranteed.

No One Thinks of Shipping Poultry Without First Fattening It—Much Money Made in Selling Preserves and Jelly.

(Prepared by the United States Department of Agriculture.)

Acting upon the advice of extension workers, South Carolina women have made steady advances in standardizing the products they offer for sale and in increasing their output. For example, in Charleston county, starting with one woman two years ago, there are now over 70 women shipping in weekly their graded and guaranteed eggs. Two years ago no one thought of fattening poultry before sending to market. Today no one thinks of sending poultry to market without first fattening it. The women realize as never before that a standard-bred fowl produces higher-priced eggs and market poultry than a mongrel. The improvement in preserving is also marked. Two years ago only one woman produced really standard preserves and jelly. Now there are nine who can for market and many others who put up a few dozen to sell. The original woman who sold preserves has so developed her business that she has built a factory and has planned for an output of 10,000 containers. The members of the local home demonstration club assist her and in this way not only make pocket money for themselves but improve their own work, and in a few years the entire community bids fair to be well known for its specialized products. The number of dozen eggs sold, as reported to the extension agent, is 8,142, and the pounds of poultry, 19,667. The value of canned goods actually sold is $512, and the total amount of all products is $8,504.94.

In the state last year approximately 5,000 containers of such standardized products as Dixie burgoo, pine bark fish stew, Brunswick stew, soup mixture, blackberry jam, fig preserves, plum jelly, grape juice, artichoke relish, and butter were put on the market through the South Carolina Home Producers' association. This year contracts have been signed for about 200,000 containers.

Grapefruit Jelly.

Grapefruit jelly is made by following the directions for making bitter orange jelly, with the exception that for each pound of fruit taken three-quarters pound of sugar is added. These directions are given by the United States Department of Agriculture.

MANY GARMENTS REMODELED

Old Articles of Wearing Apparel to Number of 55,000 Made Over by Farm Women.

Old garments were remodeled by farm women last year, as a result of demonstrations by county extension agents, into 55,000 up-to-date articles of apparel, according to reports to the United States Department of Agriculture. Under similar instruction 105,000 new garments were made.

Everyone Clean-Up and Paint-Up Now

Now that the Selectmen have made a start and collected free all the rubbish that was put out on the sidewalks, let Weymouth have a 1923 Clean-Up and Paint-Up campaign, as will be inaugurated in other towns April 30. This is the 10th year of this work in New England, and Clean-Up and Paint-Up campaigns are directed by chambers of commerce, mayors, manufacturers, women's clubs and other busy and influential people whose civic pride inspires them to clean up and paint up for the sake of health, happiness, thrift, and safety from fires.

A campaign of this kind reduces fire rates and fire losses, increases property values, makes gardens of vacant lots, removes unsafe buildings, develops school and home gardens, makes cleaner alleys, streets, yards and homes, and educates children in fire prevention and clean-up measures

A cleanup and paint-up campaign develops a community spirit that insures a cleaner, safer, healthier and more beautiful city or town.

About 200 places in New England will conduct these campaigns beginning next wek, and will compete for the beautiful silver cup offered by the New England clean-up and paint-up committee to the community that does the most efficient work during the campaign.

It is perhaps too late for Weymouth to compete for prizes this year, as the campaign has not been organized, but nevertheless Clean-Up and Paint-Up will be a mighty good thing for Weymouth. It will make our town much more attractive.

WEYMOUTH, APRIL 27, 1923

As It Seemed to Dick.

When Dick's uncle was married the second time he came to Dick's home on his honeymoon. Seeing that congratulations were in order, the boy stepped up to his uncle and, extending his hand, said with great earnestness: "Hello, Uncle Frank! You must like to get married awful well, don't you?" —Chicago Tribune.

And the Last Is the Greatest.

Five great intellectual professions have hitherto existed in every civilized nation; the soldier's, to defend it; the pastor's, to teach it; the physician's, to keep it in health; the lawyer's, to enforce justice, and the merchant's to provide, and all these men, on due occasion, to die for it.—John Ruskin.

High Civilization in Yucatan.

Yucatan is "the Egypt of America." As early as the beginning of the Christian era the people there built stone structures of excellent masonry, true angles and smooth, vertical faces. They had astronomical observatories, an accurate calendar and a better system of numerals than the Romans.

Another Conference Advised.

"In a family," said Uncle Eben, where de old folks thinks young folks is too fur ahead of de times an' where de young folks thinks de old folks is too fur behind de times, it looks to me like dar ought to be some kind of a conference wif a view to compromise." —Washington Evening Star.

First Voyage Across Atlantic.

In 1492, the Santa Maria, a Spanish vessel under the command of Christopher Columbus, traversed the ocean in 70 days. Some historians say that the Atlantic between Norway and Greenland was crossed by Norwegian sailors before the year 1000.

Effects of Warm Rain.

When a warm rain occurs over a snow-covered region it is not the rain so much as the warm wind that melts the snow. An inch of rain at 50 degrees Fahrenheit could melt only three inches of light new snow or one inch of old snow.

Character From Laughter.

An Italian professor says laughter is a surer indication of character than handwriting. The best kind of laugh is the hearty "Ha, ha, ha," showing a frank disposition. "He, he, he!" is the sign of a moody and gloomy man.

Had Wrong Idea of Statue.

The bronze equestrian statue of Marcus Aurelius in the capitol piazza at Rome was preserved by the early popes under the impression that it was a statue of the Emperor Constantine, the first Christian emperor.

New Source of Tannin.

The donga tree of the Fiji islands is to be commercially exploited; its bark contains a higher percentage of tannin than the famous Australian and South African wattle bark.—Scientific American.

French Have Discarded Word.

Encore, while a French word meaning again, and used by English and American audiences, is not employed by the French in the same sense, they saying bis, which means twice.

Treasures Worth While.

There are treasures laid up in the heart—treasures of charity, piety, temperance and soberness. These treasures a man takes with him beyond death, when he leaves the world.—Buddhist Scripture.

Electors Broken Up by Napoleon.

An elector was once a prince who had a vote in the election of the emperor of Germany until Napoleon broke up the old German empire and consequently destroyed the college of electors.

Between Girls.

Bluebelle and Maybelle were talking things over. "All men," quoth Bluebelle, "are liars." "Well, do you want them to tell you the truth about your looks?"—Louisville Courier-Journal.

CANDY

The candy in the candy store looked very tempting and very good.

From the different cases candy had been taken and given in bags and in boxes to those who had bought it.

But there was still a great deal of candy left.

"I'm the oldest candy in the world," said the licorice.

"Why, what do you mean?" asked a yellow gum drop.

"Just what I have said," replied the licorice.

"You're not any older than any of us," the marshmallow answered.

"The pride of the owner of this store is that all the candy is so freshly made and also that it is made so often," said a chocolate drop.

"Oh, you do not understand," said the licorice.

"It's very queer," the taffy answered.

"You'd better explain what you mean?" remarked the all-day sucker.

"I've been waiting for that," said the licorice.

"So you wanted to puzzle all of us?" inquired the peppermint.

"Not puzzle exactly," said the licorice.

"What then?" asked the caramel.

"Yes, what did you want to do to us?" inquired the coconut candy.

"What, indeed," asked a family of molasses kisses.

"I wanted you all to hear my story and be attentive in your sweet candy-like way," said the licorice. "That was what I wanted.

"Now, when I say I am old, I do not mean that I myself am old."

"Gracious," said the marshmallow, "you're puzzling me again."

"I believe you like to be puzzling," said the yellow gum drop.

"Yes, we get more interested when we're puzzled," said the chocolate drop.

"Do explain it all," urged the taffy.

"Please," persisted the coconut.

"Yes, I've lots of time in which to listen," said the all-day sucker.

"We want to hear," said the peppermint.

"We do," added the caramel.

And all the candy moved about ever so slightly and said in a sweet chorus:

"We want to have it all explained to us. We do not understand what the licorice is talking about. The licorice is puzzling us, and we'd be very glad to have an explanation."

"The Licorice Was Very Happy."

Now the licorice was very happy. Every candy in the candy store was now paying attention, which was what the licorice had wanted all along.

"I said I was the oldest candy in the world," commenced the licorice, and all the candy in the store kept quiet this time to hear all that the licorice had to say.

"Then I added," continued the licorice, "that while I was old, I did not mean that I was old myself.

"I will admit that that sounds a bit strange until I tell you what it all means.

"I myself am not old. That is true. But when I say I am old, I mean that my family is an old family—we're not any young candy upstarts.

"When a family speaks of being an old family, they do not mean that they're all old. They mean that the family goes back for ages and ages.

"Not that each member of the family walks back through the centuries and years, but that this family can trace back their grandfathers and grandmothers and great-grandfathers and great-grandmothers for years and years.

"That's the way it is with the licorice family.

"Years ago they made black candy, such as I am. They made it from a shrub which grows on the banks of the Tigris and Euphrates rivers. Some day if children come into the store with geographies they may tell you where those rivers are. They're old and historic rivers.

"There the family plant grows quite high, and some of the family roots grow right down into the water of these rivers. So my family dates back centuries and centuries, and it's a fact, I believe, that the licorice, my good old family, is the oldest candy in the world!"

Mistake Somewhere.

"Ma, did you ever hear a rabbit bark?"

"Rabbits don't bark, dear."

"That's funny. My story book says that rabbits eat cabbage and bark."

DRIVING CAR ON SLIPPERY ROADS

Main Cause of Skidding Is Due to Action of Brakes Operating on Rear Wheels.

PLAN TO PREVENT MOVEMENT

Rough Tread Tires and Chains Are Designed to Avoid Slips and Are Generally Considered Absolutely Essential.

Why an automobile skids is of interest to the motorist, but what to do to prevent skidding and what to do when the car is skidding are equally important topics.

The main cause of skidding of rear wheels of motorcars is due to the action of the brakes operating through the rear wheels. Skidding, of course, normally occurs only when the roads are slippery.

An automobile wheel rotates and progresses over the highway in but one direction or plane. This direction for the rear wheels is determined by the front wheels under control of the driver.

Rear Wheels Control Direction.

While the rear wheels grip the ground and rotate they control the direction of the car. However, as soon as the rear wheels are locked by the brakes they begin to slide, and as they slide sidewise practically as easily as forward, they lose the power to direct the car.

It takes comparatively little brake friction to lock and slide rear wheels on slippery roads, because there is little friction between the tires and the road surface. When once the driving wheels begin to slip the car is kept in motion by the force of inertia acting at the car's center of gravity or mass. This forward motion is opposed by the resistance of all four wheels on the ground, a resistance that is greater in the rotating front wheels than in the sliding rear wheels. Unless the combined ground resistance of all the wheels tending to stop the car, acts on the same point as the force of inertia tending to carry the car forward, there results what is called a "force couple" which causes the car to skid or spin around.

After the wheels once start to slip a very small "force couple" will produce skidding, and the skid distance is dependent upon the magnitude of the "force couple," which, in turn, depends on car speed and weight. Turning the front wheels in the direction of the rear wheel skid helps to reduce skidding, because it reduces the magnitude of the "force couple." Also periodically releasing and reapplying the brake so the rear wheels can get a grip offsets forward slip and consequently side skid.

Means to Prevent Skidding.

Two means are employed to prevent skidding in motor vehicles. The use of non-skid or rough tread tires and of anti-skid chains. Non-skid tires are designed to give forward traction and to prevent side slip. As long as there is traction the rear wheels will turn, and as long as the rear wheels turn there will be no serious side slip, unless the front wheels are blocked.

Non-skid tires furnish reliability and safety in driving—reliability, in permitting the vehicle to operate successfully over almost any kind of road and during all seasons of the year, and safety by permitting the vehicle to hold the road at all speeds and allowing the brakes to be most effective.

Non-skid treads on tires were first used on rear wheels and are now considered absolutely essential for such uses. Later non-skid tires were placed on front wheels because the treads prevented front wheel skidding, as well as permitted the rotation or exchange of the front and rear tires.

Non-skid chains accomplish the same purpose as the non-skid tire tread, that is, give additional traction and reduce side slip. Non-skid chains should supplement non-skid tires only when road conditions absolutely require them.

Because they make available in road friction the total weight of the car instead of only half the car weight, four-wheel brakes are coming into use, especially in continental Europe. Not only can cars be stopped more quickly, but they can be driven safely on wet days and in ice and snow without chains. In stopping a car equipped with four-wheel brakes, all four wheels may slide and the car as a whole slip forward. However, there appears to be little or no side skidding. This is especially true if the brakes are connected diagonally in pairs, that is, left front wheel and right hand rear wheel. With this arrangement opposite wheels are able to roll freely retaining their directing qualities.

NEGLECTED SPRINGS CAUSE HARD RIDING

They Are Intended to Soften and Scatter Road Shocks.

Breakage Is Caused by Loose Axle Clips, Incorrect Heat Treatment and Fatigue of Metal—Rust Doesn't Cause Break.

Many complaints about the average car can be traced to the neglect of the springs. Hard riding, squeaks and rattles, excessive side-way, occasional spring breakage, hard steering and locked brakes come of this neglect.

Springs perform very definite functions. They soften and scatter road shocks and hold the axles in alignment, thereby have considerable influence on the steering, wheel alignment, tire wear, and to a degree, side-sway. In certain cars the driving effort and the breaking reaction are transmitted to the frame through the springs.

Lack of lubrication may make the springs too stiff, and cause hard riding. Comparatively little oiling is needed to offset rust, due to entrance of water, and to keep the springs flexible. However, excessive lubrication may reduce the friction to the extent that the springs may become too lively.

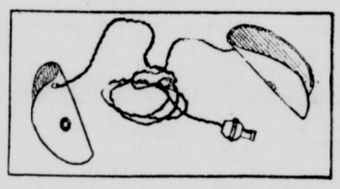

Spring breakage is caused mainly by loose axle clips, incorrect heat treatment, fatigue of metal, tight shackle bolts and incorrect design, and not by rust, as many suppose. In fact, rust seldom causes a spring to break, for a rusty spring acts as a solid mass, and when it cannot deflect, it is not likely to break, unless possibly under a very severe shock, when it may snap off at the outer end of the main leaf or plate.

As to broken leaves, if the spring is comparatively new, it will pay only to replace the one or two broken leaves, that is provided that you are able to obtain them. Ofttimes it is rather hard to secure duplicate leaves, and if the owner needs his car badly, it is better to buy a new spring rather than wait.

However, if the spring is an old one, or has settled more than about an inch, it is more advisable to get a new spring rather than only the broken leaves.

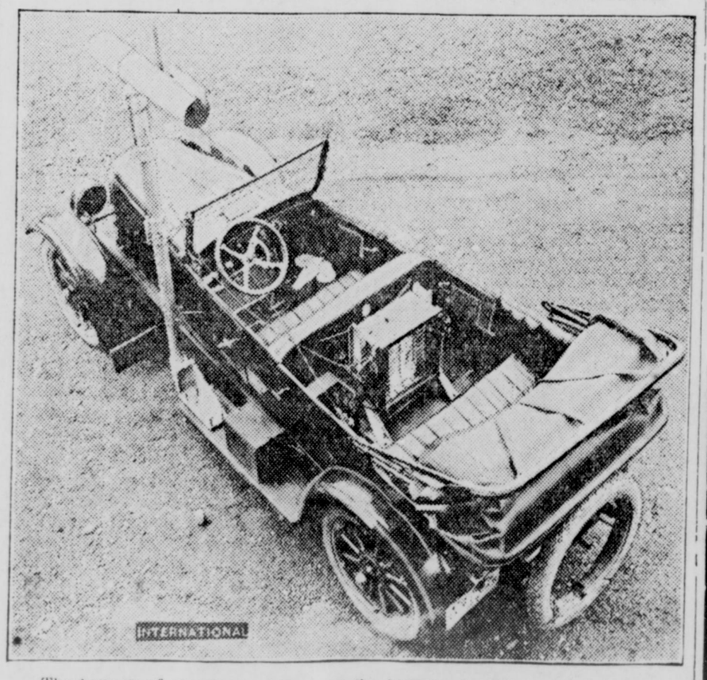

A periodical spring inspection followed by regular adjustment will assure easy riding.

Electric Hand Heater.

The driver's hands may be kept warm with these leather-covered heaters attached to each side of the steering wheel and the line connected with the battery.

NO SHORT WEIGHTS OR MEASURES

The bureau of standards, known as the hermit of public institutions, saves the nation many millions of dollars annually, by virtue of its efforts to assure everyone of full weight and measures. Gasoline and automobile tires are the main problem of the bureau at the present time, and this photograph shows some of the instruments used by the bureau to test the quality of cars. The car is equipped with recording apparatus for registering various temperatures, pressures, wind speed and direction. An automatic recording device measures all conditions that influence the power output of the car.

Peculiar Yana Language.

The Yana language of northern California represents a distinct linguistic stock and had formerly three dialects, one of which is now extinct. It possesses two forms of speech, one of which is employed by men speaking to men, while the other is used in all other cases. Practically the language has only nouns and verbs, the adjectives, adverbs, numerals, interrogative pronouns and conjunctions being formed from the verbs.

Tyndall Great Scientist.

Tyndall was one of the first to suggest that the cause of the great changes that the climate of the earth has undergone in the past might conceivably be the formation of thin canopies of gas in the atmosphere, capable of transmitting the luminous heat of the sun, but impervious to the dark heat rays radiated back from the earth.

Cable Laid in Record Time.

Six miles of telegraph cable was laid and put into service in Sweden in just eight minutes. The trick was done by stretching the cable from an airplane. Of the time consumed, six minutes was spent in flying, and the other two in making connections. Thus the cable was laid at the rate of a mile a minute.

World's Debt to Doctors.

Malaria remained a mystery until the patient detective work of doctors proved that it was the bite of a certain genus of mosquito that conveyed the disease to man. Now that the facts are known, destruction of the breeding places of these mosquitoes is followed by immunity from the disease.

Reached Absolute Limit.

A young neighbor, my sister and myself were coming home from the store one evening when it began to rain. We started to run, but after hurrying for some time, slowed up again. My young neighbor, between gasps, cried: "Virginia, please don't run any more; my heart's broke now. —Exchange.

Everlasting Mystery.

Flora had hash for breakfast. She looked at the last mouthful of her portion earnestly as she poised it on her fork. Then she passed it out of sight. But the mystery was still in her mind. "Daddy," said she, "what was hash when it was alive?"

"Pig Iron."

Pig iron is so called because the molten metal is run into a long mass with shorter pieces attached to it at right angles. The long pieces are called the sow, and the shorter are called the pigs.

Cork Production.

The tree from which cork is obtained is only fit to be barked when about twenty-six years old, and this can be done successively every eight years, the quality improving with the increasing age of the tree.

Cleaning Isinglass in Car Curtains.

Rub the isinglass in motor car curtains with slightly warm cylinder oil, after which wipe off the oil with a piece of clean cloth. Then remove the last traces of oil with a clean cloth dampened with gasoline.

Teach Children Care of Books.

Teach children the proper care of their books by having low bookshelves around the walls of their room and insisting upon their putting their books in place after the story hour.

Original Scavengers.

Scavengers were originally officials who collected scavage, a tax imposed in many English towns on all goods exposed for sale within their boundaries.

Youthful Chivalry.

A second grade teacher asked her pupils what a coward was. One little boy raised his hand and said: "A coward is a boy who fights girls."

Old Sailing Terms.

The terms "port" and "starboard" have been used when giving directions to the man at the helm of a ship since the Sixteenth century.

The letter A, in the Runic Futhark alphabet, stands in fourth place, and in the Ethiopic occupies the thirteenth place.

Human Mind at Rest.

As the firefly only shines when on the wing, so it is with the human mind—when at rest, it darkens.—L. E. Landon.

Borax Used in Ancient Days.

Borax, in ancient days, was used to clean the surface of molten gold while it was being worked and welded.

MODERN JERUSALEM

Few Boston pastors are quoted oftener than Rev. Frank Kingdon, recently pastor of the Methodist church at East Weymouth. "Jerusalem and Boston" was the subject of the address given Sunday evening in the United Methodist Episcopal church, the second in the series on "Making Boston a city of God". He said in part:

"As the Bible heroes were called of God to make Jerusalem the city of God in their day, so we are called to make Boston a city of God in our day. Boston is the modern Athens for beauty; there is no more beautiful square in the world than Copley Square, with its majestic buildings; the Fens and the parkway system are unexcelled for loveliness; no city anywhere can boast a finer sight than the Charles River basin, and Boston Harbor is unique for rugged beauty.

"Boston is the modern Alexandria for learning and healing; here are the best schools and hospitals on the globe. Boston is the modern Rome in the teaching of and respect for law; Harvard Law School is the greatest and freeist in the country, the great modern battle for law and order was won in the streets of Boston and our city is contributing Justices Holmes and Brandeis to the Supreme Court.

Boston may likewise be the modern Jerusalem for spiritual effectiveness and power when we rebuild our altars.

"Boston is clearly called of God to be a new Jerusalem. There is only one Boston. Her unique position is her responsibility underr God. God is calling Boston to be the Jerthrought her unique history. There is no other city which so strongly links the history of the Old World and the new. We can speak in understanding terms to all the world.

"Boston is the middle-aged city knowing the language both of the elders and youngers. Boston is called to spiritual leadership by her traditions: every Boston tradition is an ennobling one filled with stories of leadership in culture and spiritual power. That gives her a unique authority among cities. Men expect great things of Boston.

"God is clearly calling to us through our geographical position. Rome was the great city of the Mediterranean period because geographically she was at the center of her world. Gaul met Greek in Rome. London was the leading city of the Atlantic period because of her geographical location. Europe and America met in London. In our day East and West meet on our Atlantic seaboard.

"New York and Boston are the center of the world. As New York has taken commercial ladership, so Boston may become the spiritual Hub of the Universe. The call is clear. Boston ic called by her resources: both the old blood and the new are here with a contribution and a message. God calls to Boston to rebuild her altars that He may speak through her to the ends of the earth"

OIL AT POWER STATION

Installation of oil burners at the Quincy Point power plant of the Eastern Massachusetts Street Railway Co., the central station of the entire system, has reduced costs of generating electricity for car operation nearly one third, the trustees have announced.

The cost during the past year has been approximately $250,000 in comparison with approximately $350,000 cost for the previous year when coal was burnt.

The saving in operating costs is the most substantial that has been effected since the trustees were appointed under the law which vested the jurisdiction over the street railway in a board of five men to be appointed by the governor.

The difficulties of obtaining coal in the year 1921 and 1922 when the plant was on the verge of being shut down because of coal shortage caused the officials to place orders for the installation of oil burners. In addition to the machinery required, storage tanks were constructed and the pipe line to the wharf built so that oil carriers could be docked there and unloaded. Shipments are received regularly and because of the nature of the new fuel, the former costs of handling cinders and "pulling fires" every two or three days has been eliminated.

VETERAN PUBLISHER

Charles S. Parker, publisher of the Arlington Advocate and Lexington Minute Man, certainly is like Tennyson's "Brook" in one respect—both seem happily fated to "go on forever". Mr. Parker is just now starting out on his 85th year, during more than fifty of which he has been active editor and publisher of the two papers named.

Think of it! you roving, nomadic newspaper men, so many of whom have a touch of wanderlust likely to lead you down a long, long trail awinding within a much shorter period than the one Mr. Parker has spent in his chosen town. He has grown to be more than an ordinary citizen; he is one of the institutions of Arlington, in which town he has so long been a most influential factor.

The golden anniversary banquet celebrating the completion of his half-hundred years as publisher of the Advocate, which his fellow-citizens gave him last year, was a red-letter event that will ever be cherished as a golden memory by all who had part in it. In these days of nervous flitting about, it is restful to find one man who has happily stayed put.—Nixon Waterman in the Whirling Hub

Habit of Catfish.

Some South American catfish have a remarkable way of getting upstream. Being encased in a stiff armor, they cannot jump. So they deliberately leave the water, using their side fins which have sharp spines, like feet; and crawl around the falls, entering the water on the other side.

Solved by Woman's Curiosity

By FRANK H. WILLIAMS

(©, 1923, by McClure Newspaper Syndicate.)

Susie Cunningham had been sick—more sick at heart than anything else—but so sick that she hadn't been able to work for days. Now she was slowly recovering, though there was a sad, wistful look in her eyes that hadn't been there before her illness and a dull ache at her heart that seemed as though it would never leave her.

The trouble was that—young John Hammond, the cashier in the office where she had been employed and to whom she had been engaged, had disappeared, his accounts had been short and there had been but a brief word of explanation to Susie for his conduct. It was this brief word which had brought on Susie's illness.

The only message from John since his disappearance had come to her on a postal card on the day after he failed to come to work. It had been mailed from a nearby town and it bore these words in John's unmistakable handwriting:

"Dear Susie: I've treated you pretty roughly. Please forgive me. I was married here today. Forget me. John."

Of course Susie hadn't believed that John was a thief—she didn't yet, even these many weeks after his disappearance when the shortage still stood unexplained against his record. It was not because of the charge of theft against John that her illness came, it was because of those words on the postcard. "I was married here today."

She had loved him so deeply, devotedly, whole-heartedly. There had never been any man in her life save John. Everything had looked so rosy for them too. The little bungalow in which they were to have lived was nearing completion and they were just in the midst of happily buying furniture for it when the blow fell.

No wonder there was a wistful look in Susie's eyes, and a droop to her young lips, and an unfading ache in her heart.

Small wonder, too, that now, two weeks after John's disappearance, as Susie was getting her normal strength back, there should be a deep and abiding curiosity in her soul.

Who was it that John had married?

It was because this curiosity demanded an immediate answer that Susie, as soon as she was able, went to the neighboring town of Brampton, where the fatal postal card had been mailed, and bravely mounted the steps in the courthouse to the office of the county clerk.

"I want to look at the marriage license book, please," she said to the clerk.

The clerk, looking at her curiously, shoved a big book across the counter to her.

Susie covertly referred again to the postal card to make sure she had the right date when it was mailed in mind. Then quickly she thumbed through the pages until the proper date was found and then went over the licenses issued on that day, one by one.

When, some moments later, Susie left the courthouse there was a new light in her eyes and new resolution in her step. Her curiosity was satisfied, but in satisfying her curiosity she had found something that she must do—a task which she must put through as quickly as possible.

In furtherance of this task she did some telephoning to several different people at a public booth. Then, late in the afternoon, she boarded the train for home.

In the train she examined her postal card from John with new interest. She held it to the light; she viewed it from different angles, all with a new purpose in mind.

At last, as she caught the light on the card from a new angle, she gave a little gasp. She had discovered something—something very much worth while.

Susie returned to work the next day.

Of course there were many expressions of sympathy from fellow employees and from the executives, for her story had become known in the office on the day when she had received the postal. (Susie had promptly fainted upon receiving it, and the card had then been read by the others in the office.)

But now Susie showed little of the effects of her illness.

"What's new at the office, Anna?" Susie asked. "What are they doing about John? Who's doing his work?"

"They've been trying to trace John everywhere, but haven't got a single hint where he is," said Anna. "Otto Duemling is doing his work."

Duemling had been John's assistant before John's disappearance, and upon returning to the office Susie viewed Otto with great interest. Never before had she paid much attention to him, but now she looked at him carefully and thoughtfully.

She saw in Deumling a sleek young man of not very prepossessing appearance and no outstanding characteristics. There was nothing about him that marked his personality. He was self-effacing, very evidently efficient, and not very much inclined to hobnob or chat with the other employees.

All the afternoon Susie was busily thinking of the task she had set for herself. There was a certain definite something she must do that night, a something which rather made her shiver as she contemplated it.

And it was to enable her to do this definite something that Susie, before leaving the office that afternoon, slyly unfastened one of the ground floor windows.

It was 1 o'clock that night before Susie felt the time was propitious for doing this thing she had decided must be done. At that hour the night was pitch dark—there was no moon—and the town was almost wholly silent.

Through the night Susie stole to the window she had unfastened. Softly she raised this window and crept into the dark office, her heart beating furiously and only her determination to go through with the task she had set herself enabling her to push onward.

In the office she made her way past the furniture to the desk which had been John's.

There was a certain locked drawer in this desk she wanted to investigate.

A handy, heavy envelope opener enabled her to pry the drawer open. Greedily she caught up the papers in the drawer and took them to an inner room, where she cautiously turned on a light.

A tremulous sigh of satisfaction came from her as she examined the papers.

"I thought so," she exclaimed to herself. "I thought so!"

But hark, what was that?

Some one was stealthily opening the side door into the office.

Susie switched off the light. Fear clutched at her soul. What if she should be discovered?

She heard the sound of voices and finally made out that the intruders were a man and a woman.

She heard them move to the far end of the room, where the vault was located. Peering through the door she saw the flash of a light, then heard the sound of a clicking. The door of the safe was being opened.

Susie, taking all her determination and courage in hand, crept from her hiding place into the larger room and down the darkened aisles toward the little partitioned space where the huge vault was located.

As she came nearer she saw that the door of the vault was open. She crept to one side and looked into the vault. By a candlelight held in the hand of a man she saw that with his companion, a woman, he was opening the drawers at the back of the vault where the firm's money was kept.

She heard the two talking distinctly. The woman spoke first.

"It sure was lucky for you that Hammond had to leave so suddenly," said the woman.

"Sure was," said the man. "It was a great chance—chance of a lifetime. Trust me to grab it. I've been afraid his old mother out West would croak before this and he'd come back before I could get enough money in this vault to make it worth while to take it."

"Well," said the woman, with a short laugh, "the stuff you've already taken and charged up to Hammond isn't so bad, you know."

"Not so bad," said the man. "That was a happy thought—forging that postal and sending it to Hammond's girl—that put the final touch of truth to the thing."

Some days later Susie was safe in John's arms.

"That was an outrageously clever forgery," John cried, looking at the postal which had caused Susie so much pain. "Otto intercepted the letter I sent to you telling about my mother's sickness and traced words from that letter onto the postal. Later he inked them in. It was just his luck that there were words in the letter which enabled him to make the message the postal carried."

"Yes and then he got all the other letters you sent me and held them out. I found them in his desk the night we arrested him and that girl he was with."

"But what I can't understand," said John, "is how you got started on finding out the truth."

"Easy enough," Susie smiled. "My woman's curiosity took me to Brampton to see whom you'd married. I looked at the marriage licenses and I called up the ministers. And I found you hadn't been married at all."

"And, oh, dearest," she cried, holding him tight in her arms, "I was so glad!"

LIVES IN AMERICAN HISTORY

Rebecca Gratz, American Jewess, One of the Most Notable of Early-Day Characters.

The most famous of American Jewesses was Rebecca Gratz, distinguished for her beauty and piety, and for her friendships with eminent Americans.

There is a tradition that Henry Clay was an unsuccessful suitor, and one of her most distinguished friends was Washington Irving. This later association had important literary consequences. Irving was likewise a close friend of Sir Walter Scott, whom he used frequently to visit at Abbotsford; it is said that his description of Miss Gratz, of her loveliness of person, the fineness of her character, her devotion to her religion and her race— a devotion that had prevented her from marrying, most of the men with whom she associated having been Christians — so fired the romantic imagination of Scott that he put her in the novel that he was then writing.

In this way it happened that Scott's most famous woman character, his Rebecca of "Ivanhoe," was drawn from Rebecca Gratz of Philadelphia, writes Burton J. Hendrick in World's Work.

—15—
The Cry in the Dark.

There was a little stir of excitement as Bartley, with easy grace, arose and took his seat in the witness chair. Every one was eager to see him, and he became at once the center of all eyes.

Doctor King did not trouble Bartley with questions, but allowed him to tell his story in his own way. He recounted our arrival at the house and our examination of the body. As he told of his reasons for thinking that Slyke had been murdered, the room became very still. He described our search for clues in the tower rooms, and what he had found on the balcony. Slowly the audience realized that Slyke had not been killed in any of the rooms of the house, but on a tower sixty feet in the air.

He pictured in short, concise words how the body had been carried down two flights of stairs, undressed and put into bed. A gasp went around the room at his words, and I could see from the faces of the listeners that they could scarcely believe the story he was telling them. The sensation was increased when he spoke of the removal of the revolver from the dead man's hand while we were in the upper room of the tower. This was, without doubt, so far the most dramatic moment of the inquest.

While Bartley had been giving his testimony, the storm had come nearer. A thunderstorm is never a cheerful thing at the best, and this one was making every one very uneasy. At each clap of thunder, someone would give a start and glance nervously around.

The next witness, the photographer, was only on the stand a short time. He told of taking the pictures of the room in which the body lay and of the body itself, and stated that he had seen no revolver in the dead man's hand.

The testimony of the following witness was also brief. The boy who worked around the garage, although very much frightened, stuck to his story that he was getting into bed when he heard a shot, and that it sounded as if it were up in the air. The time, he thought, was somewhere between two and three in the morning.

When he had returned to his seat the step-daughter took his place. Her youthful face flushed under the many eyes that were turned upon her, and she never looked up. Her story was the one that she had told to Bartley and she added nothing new to it. In answer to a question as to whether she had glanced at her step-father's door when she passed it the night of the murder, she replied that she had and that it was closed. Catching the district attorney's eye at this point, Bartley motioned him to his side and they whispered together for a moment. The district attorney then asked the girl if she had seen the dog when she came in. Rather surprised at the question, she answered that the dog had met her at the front door, smelled of her dress, and followed her to the stairway before going back to his rug. When she left the stand, her testimony had not added anything to what we already knew.

I realized suddenly that we knew no more about the crime than we had when the inquest began. Though I was sure in my own mind that Slyke had been murdered, I had grave doubts if it could be proved satisfactorily to others. The almost entire absence of clues made it seem more mysterious than it had at first, if that were possible. Even the next witness, Mr. Lawrence, added nothing to our knowledge. He said that, at the close of the party, Mr. Slyke had asked him to stay behind, for what he did not know at the time. After the others had left, Mr. Slyke had taken him up to his room in the tower, and had asked him if he would like to buy a little whisky, as he had more than he needed.

There was a ripple of laughter at this unexpected statement. Though it was the first time that whisky had been introduced into the case, I doubt if anyone regarded its mention as important. The laughter made Lawrence more nervous than ever, and he talked faster and more indistinctly. He had stayed only a few moments, he said, though Slyke had urged him to remain longer. A moment after he had been released from the stand, I remembered that he had not mentioned the fact that Slyke had told him he was expecting another visitor. Whether Lawrence had forgotten it or did not wish to volunteer the information, I could not decide. It seemed to me to be a very important point for him to have omitted.

The butler, who came next, took his seat to the accompaniment of one of the worst claps of thunder that we had yet had, a clap that seemed almost in the room. Then a burst of rain swept against the windows. All through his testimony the thunder made it almost impossible to hear him, and he had to repeat many of his statements. He appeared to be a silent man, who seldom spoke of his own volition. He had little to tell us and disposed of the card party in a few words. After it had broken up and he had let Mr. Lawrence out, he had locked the windows but left the front door unfastened, as Mr. Slyke had told him that he, himself, would attend to it later. In answer to a question as to whether he had seen Slyke after Lawrence left, he replied that he had not. In fact, he had not seen him again alive. He had gone to his room, leaving the dog in the living room, as was the custom. His first knowledge that Slyke was dead came when he entered his room with Miss Potter.

So far, like all the other witnesses that had been heard, his testimony presented nothing that we had not already known. Then suddenly he added a new piece of information. "So far as we had been able to discover, the relations that had existed between Slyke and the members of his household had been the usual ones. I mean by that, that while there had been no unusual show of affection nor any signs of deep grief at his death, there had been no evidence of any trouble between them. When the butler was asked if he had ever heard words between Slyke and any member of his family, he surprised us all by saying that he had twice heard Miss Potter and the broker quarreling.

Miss Potter gave an angry start and turned a flushed face on the servant, who refused to meet her eyes. The girl by her side looked around at her aunt, startled. I glanced quickly at Bartley and saw an amused smile on his lips.

"You say you heard Miss Potter and Mr. Slyke quarreling?" asked the coroner.

The butler began to speak, but his words were drowned out by a terrific clap of thunder that shook the house. When the sound had died away in the distance, he answered, "Why, yes, sir, I did; twice."

As he paused and did not continue, the coroner asked him to tell us where the quarrel had taken place and what it had been about. From the rather self-satisfied expression on the butler's face, I judged that he was not only willing, but glad, to tell all that he had heard.

"It was one evening in the dining room," he stated, "right after dinner, and only Miss Potter and Mr. Slyke were in the room. As I was about to enter from the butler's pantry, I heard Mr. Slyke say in a loud voice, 'You make me sick.' Then came Miss Potter's voice, very angry, "I do, do I? Never mind. You will be a lot sicker before you get through. I tell you, there is lots of trouble ahead for you.' That's all I heard, for they left the room by another door."

"Do you know what they were talking about?"

The butler was silent a moment then shook his head without speaking.

"And when was the second occasion that you heard them quarreling?" he was asked.

"It was about a week later, I think. One morning, when I was passing Mr. Slyke's room, I heard them again. He seemed to be very angry about something, I don't know what. His voice was loud enough to be heard through a closed door, 'I wish you could keep your mouth shut. It's none of your business, anyhow.' Then I heard Miss Potter; she was angry also. 'You wait and see. It will be my business if you are not careful. If you keep on, something will happen to you.'"

This was an astonishing piece of information. After all, things had not gone as smoothly in the household as we had supposed. What the last expression, "If you keep on, something will happen to you," might mean, I could not decide. It might have been a threat; and, in view of what had taken place, it would be necessary for Miss Potter to explain it. Glancing at her, I noticed that though angry and nervous she was not afraid. She seemed to regard what the butler had said as more annoying than accusing. When I looked at Bartley, he showed no surprise; but then I had scarcely expected that he would, for he made it a point never to be surprised at anything that might come up. The butler admitted that he did not know what the quarrel had been about, and that, with the exception of the two times he had mentioned, the relations that had existed between Slyke and his sister-in-law had always been very friendly.

The storm was now directly overhead. Claps of thunder were almost incessant, and vivid flashes of lightning penetrated the room in spite of the heavy curtains drawn over the windows.

As the butler left the stand, there was a slight commotion in the rear of the room; and turning, I saw Roche making his way between the chairs, pushing the chauffeur ahead of him. King gave the two men a puzzled glance, and then turned to the district attorney and whispered something to him. Miss Potter also turned to see what the noise was, and an expression of consternation and dread came over her face.

The two men passed within a foot of me, and the cruel lips and shifty eyes of the chauffeur made me wonder why Slyke should have kept such a man in his employ. When they reached the front of the room, Roche motioned the chauffeur to the empty chair next to Miss Potter, who drew as far away from him as she could, and then seated himself on the other side of his prisoner. The chauffeur gave her a look filled with hatred, blended with a smile of triumph. I could see that there was something wrong between these two.

A sharp peal of thunder seemed to split the air, causing the crowd to stir uneasily in their chairs. Again the lights flickered down for a moment, and again the thunder rolled. A violent wind lashed the rain against the windows behind me, and there was scarcely a pause between the flashes of lightning. The room was deathly still; we were petrified.

Doctor King was standing behind his desk, his face white, one hand playing nervously with the papers in front of him. He started at each vivid flash of lightning and the thunder seemed to daze him. Turning to the district attorney, and speaking half to him and half to the room, he said: "I think we should adjourn the inquest until tomorrow. The storm is so bad that I doubt if we can hear the testimony of the other witnesses."

His decision seemed to be very sensible. We had been unable to hear the close of the butler's evidence because of the thunder, and I doubted if any but those in the front seats would be able to hear the witnesses that were still to be called. The district attorney objected, however, to adjourning. He said that he could not be present the next day, and thought that we had better hear the remaining witnesses at once. Sinking back into his chair, King asked the attorney whom he wanted to call next.

The district attorney rose to his feet, saying slowly, "I am going to call Briffeur, who was chauffeur for Mr. Slyke. He will—"

But whatever he was going to add we never discovered. Just at that second there came a terrific flash of lightning that seemed to burn its way across the room, followed by a deafening clap of thunder. With a sizzle the lights went out and left the room as black as the inside of a coal mine. Low murmurs came from all sides. It was enough surely to try the nerves of the most stout-hearted.

As the rumble of thunder died away, I heard King demanding, in a voice that shook a little, "Will somebody get a light—lamps or candles?"

Someone pushed back a chair, and then suddenly, rising above all else and ringing through the room with a horror that seemed to glue me to my seat, came a shriek of terror. It was sustained for a second, then died away in a long, sobbing moan.

Only White Houses Built.

The Bermudas are a land of white houses. No other color is to be seen. They are all built of the native white stone of coral formation, which underlies every foot of soil. When first quarried the stone is so soft that it may be cut with a knife, but it hardens with exposure to the air. When a Bermudan wishes to build himself a house, all he has to do is to buy himself a piece of land and scrape off a foot or two of soil to reach his quarry. By means of a saw the stone is cut into pieces of the proper size. Thin flat slabs of the same material form the roof. The houses, even including the roofs, are frequently whitewashed on the outside, and contrast strongly with the deep green verdure by which they are surrounded. There are no shanties, as there are in the rest of the world.

—The minstrel show and chicken pie supper which was held in the First church chapel was a great success and a pleasant evening was had by all who attended. The four end men, namely, Vincent Perrow, Allan Perrow, Charles Kilburn, and Donald MacDowell dressed in costume with their black faces and hands were especially amusing for all to see. The opening chorus consisted of the entire chorus singing: "A merry life", "Santa Lucia" and "Pack up your troubles in your old kit bag and smile, smile, smile". Many jokes were interspersed throughout the singing, mostly on the people in the community. A tamborine specialty was given by Mr. Kilburn which was enjoyed immensely. Mr. Galagher and Mr. Shean were impersonaetd in a song by Mr. Kilburn, and the the interlocutor, George Bicknell. A very pleasing specialty was the singing of "The little red school house" by the girls of the chorus and also solos were rendered by the end men, Vincent Perrrow singing, "She's mine, all mine"; Allan Perrow "Carolina in the morning"; Charles Kilburn "You tell her—I stutter"; and Donald MacDonald "Let's all go down to Mary Ann's" Also Mrs. Seward Jarvis sung in a very pleasing manner "Just a-wearying or you", and Miss Ruth A. Nash sung a solo entitled "Springtime" Another pleasing feature of the entertainment was the solo by the interlocuter "When the bell in the lighthouse rings, ding dong!" The closing chorus consisted of the singing of "Carry me back to old Virginny", "Massa's in de cold, cold, ground" "Way down upon the Swanee river" and then in closing the chorus with the audience joining in "The Star Spangled Banner" with Columbia holding the flag with a Campfire girl on one side and a Boy Scout on the other. This made a very effective closing for the evening.

M. on the morning of Sept. 30 next when once more we return to standard time. The New York, New Haven and Hartford Railroad and the Central New England Railroad have just announced that they will change train schedules to conform to the daylight-saving laws

During this summer period of daylight saving time, those railroads will see that the hours of all offices, freight offices, shops, and departments generally are rearranged to conform to the daylight saving time.

BROCKTON FAIR

In readiness for the golden anniversary celebration of the Brockton Agricultural Society at the Brockton Fair October 2, 3, 4, 5, and 6 the management has purchased the famous area building from the Thomas W. Lawson Dreamwold estate at Scituate. It will be moved to the Brockton Fair Grounds and erected as an Agricultural building.

The building is of steel fram construction, 110 feet wide and 160 feet long. It will have a commanding situation on the Brockton Fair Grounds and this year will contain the largest exhibits of fruits, flowers and vegetables, honey and other bee products, as well as exhibits of the granges, ever shown in New England The building will also house the home and school garden exhibits, if there is sufficient available space.

The management of the Brockton Fair also intends that the building will be used for the community good all through the year. A heating plant, balcony, dance floor and other facilities will be provided to fit all usual purposes for a convention, musical festival, reunion or other large social gathering. The building is being taken apart and moved the intervening 20 miles, from Scituate to Brockton on motor trucks.

The Brockton Fair management has just secured as a new member of its dairy show committee director, Osman M. Camburn of the Division of Dairying and Animal Husbandry of the Massachusetts Department of Agriculture. Every effort will be put forth by Mr. Camburn and his associates to secure the best possible dairy cattle in this part of the country, especially Ayrshires, Guernseys, Holsteins, Jerseys, and Milking Shorthorns. It is possible the exhibit will include a handsome showing of Aberdeen Angus and Brown Swiss cattle also.

Mr. Camburn has been in his present position with the Massachusetts Department of Agriculture three years. He was previously connected with the Universary of Vermont as dairy extension specialty, at one time with the Vermont Department of Agriculture with the Dairy Division of the United States Department of Agriculture. He was graduated from the Iowa State College and has since had charge of Holstein and Guernsey herds in Wisconsin and Iowa.

The racing committtee of the Brockton Fair has just announced a superb $40,000 racing program for harness horses. Every inducement will be made for the trotters and pacers to appear next October at "The Lexington of the East", as the horsemen call the Brockton Fair.

Every feature of the Brockton Fair is to be strengthened to make the 50th fair the golden event which will bring together the biggest crowd ever assembled in New England in five days and five nights to enjoy the greatest outdoor agricultural, educational and industrial classic.
